

VANCOUVER WINS OVER OREGON CITY ELEVEN BY SCORE OF 14-0

Handicapped by loss of some of their veteran players, necessitating the use of substitute men, Oregon City high school eleven lost the game Friday afternoon against Vancouver high by the score of 14 to 0. The local team put up a hard fight, but their broken lineup found it impossible to score.

Kellogg, who usually plays right guard, was unable to go into the battle because of injuries. Bierhus, right guard, suffered with a sore leg, and therefore played under difficulties. Harbison, right guard, was in the lineup for the first time.

Vancouver scored first in the second quarter by a forward pass. In the third quarter the visiting team scored by blocking a punt by Oregon City.

The lineup of Oregon City was as follows:

MINISTERS NOT ALIVE TO NEEDS SAYS FLINT

That a great many ministers of today are not alive to the real message was the statement made by Rev. E. E. Flint, of Portland, in an address Thursday afternoon before the state conference of Congregational churches now in session at First Congregational church, Eleventh and Main streets.

"We must recognize the fundamental questions of not what the Bible is but what it teaches," he declared. "There must be an adjustment of the use of the Bible to meet the demands of the day." He then called upon the ministers, as they returned to their charges, to interpret their work in a bigger way to fulfill their obligations as real religious leaders.

Discussing the church life and activity now as compared with church conditions before the war, Rev. Oliver P. Avery, of Portland, said that there was no definition that would adequately describe this change. "It is something that is felt," he explained, "and not expressed in technical terms."

An urgent need for Armenian relief was sounded in the address of Rev. J. J. Handsaker, of Portland, who said that a reign of terror would prevail in that country unless President Wilson's request to congress that American soldiers be sent there is heeded. "Massacres are still continuing, and will continue until drastic measures are taken to stop them," he said. "There is no government, and the Turks are taking matters into their own hands. During the war these massacres were authorized, but now the Turks are allowed to do as they please which even brings about a worse condition of affairs."

Rev. Dr. William T. McElveen, the new minister of First Congregational church of Portland, explained the Pilgrim memorial fund at the morning session. It is the plan now to raise $5,000,000 in five years, and the income from this fund, together with a certain assessment made upon ministers and churches, will form the annuities to be paid ministers who reach the age of 65.

Rev. George W. Hinman, of San Francisco, talked interestingly of a trip he had made last summer to Hawaii, his subject being "Christian Americanization in the Mid-Pacific." An interesting part of the afternoon session was the address by Mrs. Eva Emery Dye, of Oregon City, noted as a historian and authoress, who spoke on "The Beginnings of Congregationalism in the Northwest."

LOCAL MAN LEAVES FOR ENGLAND TO ENGAGE IN SHIPPING BUSINESS

Eldon Blanchard, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Blanchard, of this city, will leave Monday for Liverpool, England, where he will make his home, having purchased an interest in a shipping firm. This is one of the largest firms shipping lumber from the United States to England. His wife and sons, Eugene, Raymond and Robert, will remain in Oak Grove until spring, when they will leave for England.

Eldon Blanchard was in the service as a first lieutenant with Company G, 143d U. S. Infantry, under command of his brother, Captain Lowell Blanchard, and was stationed in England, most of the time having been at Liverpool, where he was connected with the debarkation department. Later he was promoted to captain. He spent a brief time in France, and returned to the United States in the early part of October.

While in England he became favorably impressed with the country, and at that time decided to make his home there. Blanchard was born in Oregon City. He was one of the most popular of officers in the regiment. He was a lieutenant during the trouble with Mexico, and has had much military training.

About 30 members of the Methodist church, of which Mr. Blanchard is a member, tendered him a surprise a few evenings ago while he and his family were visiting at the home of his parents. The evening was spent in a social manner, and those attending regretted to see the young man leave for a foreign country, but predicted that he would return again to this country.

TWO STILL ARE FOUND BY SHERIFF IN COUNTY

An adventure that reads like some of the exploits related in Harold Bell Wright's "Shepherd of the Hills," where a raid upon moonshiners in their mountain fastnesses is described, took place Thursday morning when Sheriff W. J. Wilson, assisted by Deputies A. G. Metades, Henry Hughes and a revenue officer, raided two stills, one at Ames and the other near Sandy.

Located back from the roadway, secluded among the trees, with all the pretensions of a dwelling where persons are wont to seek peace and quiet, the house at Ames, in what is known as the Bull Run district, proved to be a place that concealed a still of rather pretentious proportions.

And presiding over the whiskey-making outfit, when the officers arrived, was Mrs. W. J. Connelley, who was dressed in a pair of overalls. She greeted the sheriff and his assistants in a nonchalant way, and told them to "walk right in and take a look."

And the officers took her at her word. The inside of the house from all appearances was innocent enough of the device which it was said to contain. A search instituted by the sheriff soon revealed, however, a still of copious capacity, a galvanized iron one, located in the basement. A 30 foot pipe leading from the still up stairs was used as a feeder.

Mrs. Connelley was not at all disturbed by the discovery. She took the matter as a joke and laughed heartily at the way she had evaded the law so long. Nearly 100 gallons of mash was confiscated.

"We're going over to Sandy and raid another still," one of the men in formed her.

"Is that so. Take me along. I bet you he don't make as good a showing as I did," the woman replied.

The officers, with their two prisoners, the woman and E. M. Louthier, who was found in the house, then proceeded to a shack not far from Sandy. Upon entering the place, not an evidence could be detected of the alleged still. A search soon brought to light a still which, although not as large, was as ingenious as the first one. It was located under the floor. A piece of carpet concealed the place from the casual observer. Clarence Cassidy, the proprietor of this still, was taken into custody, much to the amusement of Mrs. Connelley who "kidded" the new prisoner upon the fact that his outfit made such a sorry appearance when compared to hers. Only 50 gallons of mash was confiscated during the latter raid.

The woman retained the utmost good nature during the trip to Oregon City.

The prisoners were held until Friday morning when their cases will be heard by the local authorities. They will then be handed over to the federal officers.

PURSE, LOST BY MISS BRADY IN PORTLAND, RETURNED TO OWNER

As an illustration of honesty a Portland young man figures a prominent part in returning a purse containing $20 in paper money to Miss Margaret Brady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Brady, of this city.

Miss Brady attended a performance at a theater in Portland a few weeks ago, and accidentally dropped her pocketbook as she was leaving the theater. The man in charge of the box office was asked if such a purse was handed in, and he explained that very few purses were returned that contained money.

A few days ago a letter arrived at the Brady Mercantile company's store, inquiring if the firm could give him any information regarding a lost pocketbook, as a slip from the company's store was also among the contents. The letter was written by C. L. McDonald, of the Acme Cement Plant company, of Portland. The pocketbook and contents have been returned to Miss Brady. Mr. McDonald even went to the trouble to have the package insured.

LOCAL FACTORY PLANS TO MAKE PUNCTURE PROOF

R. J. Staats, business manager of the new corporation—The Puncture Proof Lining & Trice company, which will start into operation in this city about the first of the year, who has been on an eastern trip to purchase necessary machinery for the new manufacturing plant, returned to Oregon City Thursday evening. Among the places Mr. Staats visited were Chicago, Akron, Ohio, Anderson, Indiana. He purchased a large portion of the machinery in the latter city. Some of the machinery purchased in San Francisco at an earlier date was arrived.

The building will be erected in the northern part of the city, near the sawmill. A building on the ground is to be thoroughly renovated and made into a manufacturing plant. The object of the corporation is to manufacture automobile tires that are puncture proof, a demonstration recently being given proving their value.

The company is composed of many prominent men of Oregon City. Bert J. Staats is business manager; Dr. C. A. Stuart, president; M. P. Chapman, vice president; Emory Noble, secretary; T. P. Randall, treasurer. Dr. Stuart and his father, Dr. G. A. Stuart, are the inventors of the tires the company will manufacture.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE AMERICAN RED CROSS. Repatriating Prisoners.

When hostilities ceased there were in the hands of their Teuton captors millions of prisoners of war of all Allied countries, the terrible plight of whom is well known to all the world. Red Cross workers, carrying relief supplies of clothing, medicines and supplementary foodstuffs, penetrated the Central Powers as soon after the armistice as the military authorities would permit, and the work of getting the prisoners started back to their own countries was soon begun. In this photograph a group of these men are seen packed up and restored to something like normal health, awaiting the train that will carry them out of bondage.

EX-SERVICE MAN IS BACK AFTER EXCITING RECORD

Archie Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, of Sandy, who has been in the naval service for the past two years, was in Oregon City Thursday, having received his discharge from the service at Bremerton, Wash., and is among the boys glad to be home.

Archie Mitchell has had some exciting experiences while in the service. He enlisted as a fireman, and when receiving his discharge was a first class petty officer. On one of his early trips Mitchell met with an accident, when a pipe burst causing scalding water to be thrown over Mitchell's body. His hands were thoroughly cooked by the water and steam, and he was in the hospital of the ship for over a month. During most of that time Mitchell was unable to even feed himself and has fully recovered the use of his hands.

Mitchell served on a number of vessels while making his trips to France. Among these was a cruiser and the last one was the Emperor, having a crew of 2400 men, and carrying 15,000 passengers. Many troops were taken to France and returned to the United States on this boat, the second largest in the world.

Mitchell has enjoyed his experiences in the service, and especially the trip home when he came through the Isthmus of Panama, being allowed several days' furlough at Panama City, and also a furlough while at Cuba.

Mitchell was one of the four sons of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell serving his country, the youngest son having been at a training camp, and too young to have enlisted when the three brothers left for overseas duty. Roy and the late Harry Mitchell served in the army, the latter having been killed in the government service near Mount Hood during a forest fire in the early summer, a few days after his arrival home from France.

Mitchell visited his sisters, Miss Mary Mitchell and Mrs. Joseph Justin, while here.

Skeleton, Found in Forst, Identified As Lost Hunter

William Weismandel, J. L. Waldron and Ralph Tracy, who have been on a hunting expedition in southern Oregon, making their headquarters in the wilds of Cow Creek canyon out from Roseburg, have returned to Oregon City, each man getting his part of deer.

Weismandel had an experience that he will not soon forget. He had shot a deer and had started to cross over a ravine to look for the animal, when a pair of boots protruding from fallen leaves met his eyes.

Upon his arrival at the spot he scraped away the leaves, and to his horror found the skeleton of a man. A few fragments of clothing remained, including a pair of gloves still on the hands. A watch and a compass were found. Between the knees was a gun. Weismandel then reported the discovery to the sheriff of Roseburg. He accompanied the sheriff and cornered to the spot, and when reaching the place, the officer said, "It is poor old Drake."

Drake disappeared 16 years ago, having gone to hunt for deer. He was probably caught in a snow storm and then lost his way.

The wife, who had later moved to another part of the northwest, happened to be in Roseburg at the time the body was found, and she was immediately notified and gave a description of her husband, which corresponded with those of the body found, even to the filling of his teeth.

The leather boots were in such perfect preservation that it was necessary to cut the shoe strings in order to remove them from the feet. The bones were placed in a box and removed to Roseburg.

Mr. Drake had an insurance policy in the New York Life Insurance company. The widow was unable to secure the insurance, and since the body has been found she will be paid the amount of the policy.

Sheriff Quine was one of the men engaged in hunting for Drake when he failed to return after leaving on his hunting trip.

MOONSHINER CAUGHT BY SHERIFF AT GUN POINT

Climbing over the railing on Singer hill, jumping up steps with whirlwind velocity, making turns and twists in Douglas Fairbanks fashion, Sheriff J. Wilson, at the point of his revolver, captured Charles Straight, of Clackamas Heights Saturday afternoon on the charge of manufacturing moonshine whiskey. Straight was taken to the county court house, where he was released under $500 bail pending a hearing which will come up Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Reports have reached the office of the sheriff from time to time that liquor was being dispensed in Oregon City to the thirty ones who were willing to pay the price. Cases of drunkenness were not an infrequent occurrence. And as a result the sheriff and his deputies, A. G. Mendes and Henry Hughes, determined to cut off some of the avenues of supply.

Acting upon a tip that certain of the amber fluid coming to Oregon City had its source in the Clackamas hill section, the officials started an investigation. It was then that their suspicions centered on the Straight house.

Saturday afternoon the sheriff and his retinue decided to make a search of the dwelling. Going up Singer Hill, they spied Straight coming down on his way to the city. A bulge in his back pocket indicated that some of the home made brew was even then being transported to prospective customers.

Straight recognized the sheriff and intuitively sensed that trouble was stirring. For a moment he stood undecided, then he started on a wild dash down the hill toward the town.

Like football players ready to make a tackle, deputies Mendes and Hughes sought to block the way of the runner. But the burly form of the fugitive, as he dashed along in a wild stampede, broke through the barriers. Then it was that the anti-climax occurred. With his hat lost, revealing a disheveled mass of hair, his coat thrown open, Straight made a dramatic picture as he suddenly stopped near the railing of the steps. Then he reached around to his pockets; a bottle flashed in the sun, and a crash of glass followed. In a twinkling he produced a second bottle and this met the fate of the first.

Then he continued his dash for freedom in leaps that would have done credit to a bucking broncho.

But the gates to liberty, now so near, suddenly closed. Then came the climax.

For there in front of him stood Sheriff Wilson who defied further progress with the gleaming barrel of a six shooter. "Advance another step and I'll fire," warned the sheriff in cutting tones. Straight stopped. Handcuffs were slipped on and the trip to the court house was made without incident.

It was due to the quickness of the sheriff in sizing up the situation that made the capture possible. Realizing that Straight, once he made the town, would find a hiding place, Wilson took a short cut, entailing a series of acrobatic stunts that rivaled some of the feats of the renowned Fairbanks, and thus headed off the fleeing man.

Later in the day the sheriff and his assistants conveyed Straight to his home in Clackamas Heights, where two gallons of whiskey and 100 gallons of mash were found.

It is said that the moonshine had the appearance of being the result of a brew of green corn and rotten grapes.

"Folks who drink this stuff," said the sheriff, "don't risk of soon becoming fit subjects for the state asylum."

New York Police Round Up Radicals

New York, Nov. 11.—Seventy-four alleged radicals and "Reds" were still in custody today as a result of raids of federal agents and police of radical headquarters here Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Half of them are held for deportation by the immigration authorities. The others are charged with various offenses.

West Linn Resident Harvesting Apples Hood River

Joseph Bethune, who is engaged in harvesting apples at Hood River, being employed at the Perry orchard, spent Sunday at West Linn, where he visited his mother, Mrs. Maude Stewart. Mr. Bethune resides at West Linn, and is thoroughly enjoying the outing at Hood River, having unusual experience, for several days picking apples that were covered with snow. Hood River experienced one of the earliest snowfalls a few weeks ago, and it was while Bethune was there it occurred. Very little damage has been the result. The Perry orchard is one of the largest orchards in the Hood River country.

Noise Makers of Legion Ring Bells

A demonstration, similar to that held in Oregon City a year ago when the armistice was signed, was held in Oregon city late Monday night. A number of the members of the Willamette post, American Legion, met on Main street and decided to celebrate the occasion by ringing the bells of the churches and fire houses.

A. G. Beattie, one of the active members of the Legion, acted as leader, and sent out the young men to the various churches, fire houses, and to the manufacturing establishments. They had no sooner left when the bells commenced ringing, and the whistles blew themselves hoarse. They blew until there was no more steam, and after "steaming up" again they started in for some more noise. With these whistles, church and fire bells ringing and the honking of automobiles there was a din for about 20 minutes.

As two of the young men from the American Legion were leaving the Methodist church after ringing the bell, they placed their name in the big register of visitors at the church. It was a memorable day for the young men who had seen overseas service.

Jury Refuses to Fix Responsibility

The jury which met Thursday to inquire into the cause of the death of Louis C. Smith, who was killed Tuesday when an electric car of the P. R. L. & P. line struck the automobile in which he was riding at Glen Echo crossing, did not fix responsibility in the case. The following statement was issued:

"We, the jury duly impaneled to inquire into the cause of death of the above named decedent, find that his name was Louis Charles Smith; that he was of the age of 38 years; that he came to his death in Clackamas county, Oregon, at Glen Echo station; death was caused by a collision with a P. R. L. & P. car at Glen Echo station."

Federal Men Fill Jails With "Reds"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—With the jails in fourteen cities crowded with members of the Union of Russian Workers and federal district attorneys throughout the country preparing under the direction of Attorney General Palmer their cases against more than 200 radical leaders arrested in recent raids, Americans are getting a glimpse of the "social order" planned by the Reds to replace the government of the United States.

STRIKE OF MINERS IS HELD TO BE ILLEGAL

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 8.—Officials of the United Mine Workers of America today were ordered by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson to withdraw their order calling 400,000 members to strike.

The judge also made the restraining order preventing them from furthering the strike a temporary injunction.

The union leaders were allowed until 6 o'clock November 11 to withdraw the strike order.

"I am going to hold that even two miners who work with their hands cannot conspire to quit work."

Judge A. B. Anderson made this statement informally in hearing arguments on the government's appeal for an injunction in the coal strike, and before he had made his final ruling. "The Lever act is still in force," the judge continued, "and its powers are still in existence."

"The Clayton act, in my opinion, doesn't apply to this case."

"Congress has the right to declare war and carry on war and it is necessary to feed, clothe and warm its soldiers."

A request by Henry Warrum, chief counsel for the United Mine Workers, to postpone hearing on the coal strike injunction proceedings for one week was made when the hearing opened in federal court today.

Still Searching for Son Missing Overseas

Arthur Rogers, only son of G. E. Rogers, of Willamette, who is listed among the missing, has never been heard from since he was last seen in a hospital in France. The young man was 17 years of age when he left here to enter the service two years ago, and was a member of Company B, First Regiment of Engineers.

Every effort has been made to find any trace of the soldier since he was taken to a hospital after being wounded in battle. It is believed by a number of his comrades that he died shortly after being sent to the hospital. Others, however, have hopes of his return. The father has spared no pains in trying to have his son located or some account given after being taken to the hospital.

LIQUOR MAKERS PAY FINES

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Stipp Friday on charges of making intoxicating liquor, Mary L. Connett, whose still near Ames, on the Bull Run road, and Charles Cassidy, whose still in Sandy were raided late Thursday afternoon by Sheriff Wilson, Deputies H. E. Mead and Henry Hughes and a government officer, pleaded guilty and were each fined $100, which they paid. E. M. Louthier, arrested with Mrs. Connett, pleaded not guilty. As no direct evidence was held against the man, he was turned over to a federal officer who took him and Mrs. Connett and Cassidy to Portland to answer federal charges.
