

Cranberry Plant Continues Expansion With Work Under Way By Perrott and Sons

Ed Hughes, manager of Plant No. 8 of the National Cranberry Association at Coquille, and Wilho Ross, superintendent of Plant No. 6 at Markham, Washington, and members of the operations committee, Lewis McGeorge and Wm. T. Dufort, met Tuesday to discuss and review plans of reconstructing and remodeling of Plant No. 8.

A freezer building constructed last year is being completed and insulated and will accommodate 10,000 pounds of berries per day, with a storage capacity of 50,000 pounds of berries. This building will be cork-lined and will include the latest type of blast freezers. York Corporation is furnishing equipment and machinery.

A new canning room enclosure is being built in the basement, which will include three lines, a fast line of 14-ounce glass for whole sauce, a 200-can per minute line of one lb. cans, and a No. 10 or 1 gal. set-up for either whole or jellied sauce.

The cook room will include six 200-gallon kettles, and will have a capacity of 300 barrels a day, which will amount to approximately two carloads of canned sauce every day.

On the main floor will be the fresh berry sorting equipment, which will further increase the output of the plant, and also furnish berries of the highest and most uniform quality for the market.

Construction began Monday by Perrott & Sons Construction Co. of Coquille, and equipment will be installed by National Cranberry association personnel as fast as it is received in order to have the plant ready well in advance of next harvest season.

The National Cranberry association feels assured that with these improvements and additions to its plant, it will be able to give its grower-members the best service possible during the canning season.

City Manager Asks For Street Plans

"Now is the time," said City Manager John Ellertson, "for the residents of Coquille to petition for street paving and improvements for next summer."

Following a similar plan used on Henry street and Knowlton Heights street last summer, the cost is to be borne by the property owners, with the city supervising and contracting for the work.

Plans and petitions should be filed at once with the city manager's office, Mr. Ellertson said.

Santa Claus Show Big Success Here

In one of the most successful Retail Trades committee projects this year, the Santa Claus and free show at the Liberty theatre last Saturday was still drawing praise from Coquille shoppers this week.

Santa Claus, played by Bert Pinkston, was swamped as he went up and down the main streets of the downtown business area. Children would converge on him as he started walking and many a father got a pleasant surprise when he was told that Santa had promised them various gift toys at Christmas time.

Handled by the Retail Trades committee under the chairmanship of John Purkey, free candy and free tickets to the Liberty theatre were given to all children.

Large crowds from the countryside also attended the special Christmas show.

Merchants also did an unusual amount of business on Saturday.

Attend Meeting At Coos Bay

City Manager John Ellertson attended a meeting of the State Board of Health concerning water sanitation and related problems Tuesday afternoon in Coos Bay. Bandon Raspberries Ripe and Delicious

Down along the coast where the sea roars gently and the gulls soar high in the sky, in fact at Bandon, raspberries are big, and ripe, and delicious right now, says our subscriber and reader, Mrs. Herman Brown who dropped in to The Sentinel today to tell us that she had picked a large bowl of the red fruit to serve on her table last night.

The Viscar Greene may have a daffodil that gets into the Oregonian's editorial page, says Mrs. Brown, but we at Bandon have all manner of early things, and the climate is really lovely there. So nice in fact that the Browns have been picking raspberries all during the months of November and December.

Christmas Operetta Set December 15-16

Ballet dances, dramatic moments and touching Christmas scenes will be enacted with a background of vocal choruses on the night of December 15 and 16 when the operetta, "Christmas For Others," is presented. All children of the school are participating from the opening chorus of first graders through the fifth grade. Curtain time is 8:00 p. m.

Tickets will be sold by boys and girls of the school with admission prices set at 50 cents for adults and 20 cents for children under 12 years. Tickets may be purchased for either Monday or Tuesday nights.

The operetta is under the direction of Miss Vivian Plummer with music played by Mrs. Lavinia Pearl.

Plans for changes in the coffee shop and a complete re-decorating job await a business trip to Portland by Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and Blanche Nesmith at which time final plans for the banquet room additions and the new cocktail lounge at the hotel will be completed.

E. L. Perrott and Sons of Coquille are handling the contracting work.

Boardman Would Accept Sunset Park

Sam Boardman, state park superintendent, would be willing to ask the state highway commission to accept Sunset Beach as a third park in the Coos county area on the Pacific coastline, he informed Judge L. D. Felsheim last week.

The next meeting of the commission is Dec. 29th in Salem. The county is making a formal offer of the park to the state and feel that this will preserve the natural beauties of this lovely little crescent bay for the future of tourists and Oregon citizens.

At the present time there are two other parks in the area, Shoreacres, the lovely former estate of Louis J. Simpson, and the Cape Arago state park.

Sunset Beach is a natural beauty spot and recreational area.
