cold hard cash to the Del Beebe company and though we don't have any authenticated word for it, the amount of net profit another few weeks of clear weather will make for the company who took the highway 101 Coquille-Coos Bay job, it is up there in many, many figures. They could have lost just as much, and this way you may have a year or more knocked off the time you're going to have to wait to drive the new modern boulevard to "Snoos" Bay.

We can't help but note the fact that a lot of grownups have taken over the Halloween night parties and it used to be that the youngsters got the full benefit of Halloween.

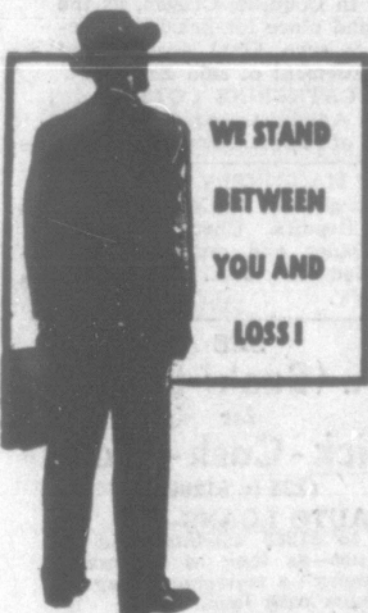

Coquille's flying dentist, Doc Hamilton, is having a heck of a time these days trying to get a customer sold on the idea of flying from Portland, Oregon, to Portland, Maine, next spring. Seems Doc has approached Tony Estes and others while he makes a sale to the male half of the partnership, he has more difficulty when it comes to the better half of the bargain. Now, he gets the wife in his reclining chair and while her mouth is propped open and she can't talk, tells her he's going to take her husband on the air trip which is the summer cruise of the Oregon airplane club. (Last summer they went to Mexico City). So far, the score is zero-zero.

Something different on Don Nesmith's menu at the Hotel Coquille made its appearance the other day in the form of lobster thermidor. Just in case you remember how it tastes down on S. F.'s Fisherman's wharf, then that's how the new fish chef at the Hotel turns it out. It's really worth trying. And the fact that the new chef at the hotel came up to Coos county to start himself a fine motel near the Bandon beaches and is making this area his home after twenty-five years of churning in California is a break for the diners-out. This should call for another serving, Don.

One of the most attractive sights on Taylor street these nights is the winking-eyed pumpkin with a great big "vacancy" carved in his yellow chest at the Summer's Myrtle Lane motel. Youngsters have found that they have to ride downtown all the time, and it's the reason. Tourists, too, have found their eye captured by the pumpkinman, and all in all we'd say hat's off for some mighty nice holiday decorating. Such things add to a city's fun.

RETURN FROM CONVENTION

George Burr and Stan Sherwood have returned from the Pacific Logging Congress held at the Multnomah hotel in Portland. They report a packed attendance and a lot of highly interesting items on the program. Loggers and lumbermen from all over the West were in attendance. Al Smith of Coquille is one of the five Oregon trustees of the Pacific Logging Congress.

Polls To See Onslaught

Attorney James Norman has unleashed a lot of dynamite in his campaign against Ben Flaxel, district attorney, and the fight has gotten serious over in and around the bay.

With the Coos Bay Times pulling down its blinds and turning on sweet music on the radio, no support has been very much in evidence for any candidates, and if anyone expected to get a Dopesters point out the record of newspapers in helping out other campaigns and this may be a help to all the boys who want a job or want to retain one.

Best bet on Flaxel and Norman right now is that its even-steven, and Coos county could have a Republican district attorney despite the last minute barrage of the Demo forces.

Fred Kruse, present Coos commissioner, is running for re-election on the Democratic and Republican ticket against G. A. Imhoff, progressive. Commissioner Fred True with both parties' endorsement is opposing Joe Glickman, a progressive; while County Clerk Lloyd W. Oddy, Assessor Charles Forrest, Treasurer Clara A. Stauff, and Surveyor J. N. Gearhart are all unopposed. Mrs. Martha Mulkey Purdy, veteran Coos county school superintendent, has no opposition and is running on the non-partisan ticket.

Eleven bills are up for the vote of the people. They would amend the constitutional six per cent limitation; authorize indebtedness for state reforestation; authorize a boys' camp at Timber, Oregon; amend the present licensing and acquisition of provisions of the hydro-electric commission; remove property requirements for voters on school elections; increase personal income tax exemption; grant a bonus to war veterans; liberalize the Oregon old-age pension law; prohibit the use of fixed appliances for salmon fishing in the Columbia river; legalize the selling of liquor by the glass in Oregon.

Gossip around the south end of the county indicate that a large negative vote is going to be marked in the "No" column of most of the bills.

Polling places in the county are as follows:

Churchmen Speak At Convocation

Archdeacon Perry Smith of the diocese of Oregon and Father Hall Gross of Oregon City were guest speakers at the bi-annual meeting of the Southwestern convocation of the Episcopal church, held in Coquille on Wednesday, October 20.

Father Smith, who spoke at the evening service, explained the distribution of money given by each parish for the upkeep of missions. The topic of Father Gross' meditation given during the afternoon was "Holy Communion and Its Application in Daily Life."

Dean Robert Greene of Coos Bay acted as chairman for the day's meetings and assisting on the program were Father Robert Lessing of Coquille, Father Dan Bacot of Bandon and Father Luther Ison of Gold Beach.

Selections by St. James' choir, directed by Wayne Smith, added greatly to the evening program.

A good attendance from all parts of the district was evidenced at the convocation.

Jury Called To Study Accident

The jury which was released on October 20 was again called into session on October 25 to deliberate on the case of James H. Jackson vs. R. L. Stewart, a damage suit, involving the collision of an automobile and motorcycle.

Ben Flaxel is attorney for the plaintiff while Bedingfield and Grant are acting for the defendant.

On the jury are T. S. Drake, W. W. Gurney, Clifford Cox, Leon E. Decker, Leslie E. Croft, Otto L. Davis, Melon L. Ashworth, Wm. Klein, Paul I. McNair, Carl Lattin, Florence A. Barton, and Lawrence Burns.

Guests From Newport—Mrs. Machon has had as her guests, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fitzpatrick of Newport, Oregon. Mrs. Fitzpatrick is a relative of Mrs. Machon.
