Equalize Two Ways

The board of equalization met Monday as per annual custom. To an onlooker it would seem the real function of the board is really to lower assessments, as the individual who complains of an assessment too low has never been discovered. There are constant complaints that land in certain sections of the county is being held for speculation and is assessed too low compared with the price demanded from prospective buyers.

It would seem that the real function of the board should be to take the initiative in adjusting values and assessments and if there are interests that are escaping their just share of the burden, see that equalization works both ways and really conforms to Webster's definition of the term.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD HAS ADDED ELEVENTH TO HER COMMANDMENTS

Jean, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cox, of this city, has decided that there should be an eleventh commandment, and this is "Thou Shalt Not Slap."

A few days ago Jean had asked her mother for an apple she was preparing to cook, and being told they were green she helped herself to one during the absence of her mother from the room. When Mrs. Cox entered the room and found the child had taken the apple and was eating it, she was punished by having her hand slapped. The little girl, crying, left the room and told her little brother, Velmore, that she did not love mother any longer. The lad, looking wise, exclaimed, "Sister, God says thou should honor thy father and thy mother, and you must remember this." The little girl receiving no sympathy from her brother, then exclaimed: "Yes, but God says you should not slap." It is doubtful if little Jean's commandment will be followed in the Cox household when the children disobey their mother.

These two children attend the Methodist Sunday school, and their teacher has been teaching them the commandments, and the little tots have become quite interested, trying to follow them in their daily life.

At the special election held in West Linn Monday for the purpose of deciding two questions brought before the people, the final results of the voting show clearly that the property owners of that municipality do not want to obligate themselves with the proposed bond issue of $76,500 which it was proposed to pledge for the purpose of hard surfacing the county roads with in the corporate limits. An eleven-hour discussion of the fact that the County Court proposes to take the road fund money out of the hands of all cities in the county, and the failure to deny the report on the part of the County Court is given as the cause for the defeat of the bond issue. The vote on the measure was exactly 2 to 1 against, being 108 for and 216 against.

The second question submitted to the voters, that of allowing cows to run at large on the streets of West Linn, was passed the count of the final vote showing 217 ballots cast for, and 115 against the measure. According to precincts the residential section of West Linn voted down the measure, but the outlying districts went solidly for it and overcame the earlier lead.

MILITARY TRAINING FOR YOUTH CLAIMED ABSOLUTE ESSENTIAL

PORTLAND, Sept. 9.—Each and every boy—whether of native or foreign birth—who is being educated on American soil should be given a term of eight or nine months of concentrated military training to develop in him the basic principles of Americanism.

This is the statement made by Colonel Charles H. Martin, head of the army recruiting station in Portland, who saw more than a year's overseas service. He was a major general of the 90th division after the armistice.

According to Colonel Martin, it is in the adolescent youth and not in the mature man that the spirit of obedience, fortitude, courage, loyalty and unselfishness should be instilled by military training.

Practically all the business men had withdrawn their advertisements from the News at the request of the American Legion. The suspension of the paper was urged by the conservative element of the council.

EIGHT NOVITIATES INTRODUCED BY ELKS TO HERD MYSTERIES

At a regular meeting of Oregon City Lodge No. 1189, B. P. O. Elks, eight novitiates were introduced into the mysteries of the order with due ceremonial rite, the degree work, being performed by the officers of Portland Lodge No. 142, who made the trip to this city Saturday evening especially for the occasion.

The initiatory work followed the regular business session of the lodge and was itself followed by a period of social intercourse and the evening terminated with a big feed, to which the many members of the Antlered herd did ample justice. During the business session it was voted that the local lodge assembly hall be improved with a hardwood floor and that arrangements be made for the holding of a dance as soon as practicable after the completion of the improvements, which it is expected will be in the early part of October.

Following the initiatory work the assembled members were entertained by musical selections by Frank Thorne, assistant organist at the Liberty theater in Portland, and his offerings were received with many sincere expressions of enthusiasm.

Comments were heard on every hand during the progress of the ritualistic ceremony on the wonderful work as it was performed by the Portland degree team, and no one of the members present could find the least trace of doubt in his own mind when the work had finished that the first honors conferred on the Portland team at the State convention at Klamath Falls had been undeservedly bestowed.

The local lodge at its meeting Friday evening resumed active operations after the summer vacation and it was freely predicted that the coming fall and winter season would see a degree of activity in its affairs that will promise a most healthy growth.
