

PERSHING AND FIRST DIVISION ACCLAIMED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The First Division, of world war fame, this afternoon achieved its final and greatest triumph.

Led by General John J. Pershing, the First Division—"first in France, first to fight, but last to return"—swinging along immortal Pennsylvania avenue with the rhythm of a delicately balanced poem, captured the hearts of the national capital, and passed into its glorious chapter of history.

For the hundreds of thousands who saw it the spectacle of this grand force of militant democracy in review created one of those rare occasions in the lives of men and women when the blood, with a leap, surges through the veins, tears of elated emotion escape restraint and thoughts are amid the clouds.

"FRITZY" BOYESEN OF BELL HOTEL FAME IS ARRESTED IN RENO

"Fritz" Boyesen, famous in the annals of Clackamas county, records as the proprietor of the notorious Bell hotel in Milwaukee, has again come to light after a period of absolute silence, and from reports recently received appears to be still pursuing his old-time methods of gaining a livelihood.

A communication received by Atty. G. L. Hedges from Reno, Nevada, tells of his arrest and pending trial for illegal operations in the hotel business and indicates that he faces a penalty that will deal more heavily with him than did the trial in Clackamas county which resulted in his disappearance some years ago. The last time Boyesen was arrested in Clackamas county he was fined $500 and given a jail sentence. After paying the fine he was told to "beat it," which he did most effectively.

The following article from the Reno Gazette tells the story of Boyesen's latest experience in his life of attempted law evasion:

TONOPAH, Sept. 8.—P. M. Boyesen, owner of the Grand restaurant, extended his operations last week by buying the old Casino of happy memory, and immediately took possession. About the time of his debut the state police raided the place and arrested Boyesen for alleged bootlegging. The goods were found snugly concealed.

When the prisoner was haled into the justice court his attorney set up the plea that he was innocent since he never suspected that any liquor was on the premises, and there certainly was no liquor mentioned in the bill of sale. He declared the stuff must have been left over by the previous owner, and pleaded so hard that the court postponed the hearing until this afternoon, when the defendant will be given a chance to corroborate his statement.

Another reason for the leniency was the fact that the court had been officially advised by the attorney general that in all cases of proven bootlegging a jail sentence must be imposed, as provided by law. The district attorney agreed with the court that it would be unfair to the prisoner to act hastily and the adjournment was arranged.

It is understood that Attorney-General Fowler will handle the prosecution of Boyesen himself and if Boyesen is convicted will insist that not only the fine, but the jail sentence be imposed.

JUVENILE FAIRS IN CLACKAMAS COUNTY TOWNS GAIN INTEREST

Juvenile fairs are to be held at Mackburg and Stafford September 18, and on the 19th similar fairs will be held at Boring and Oak Grove. The children of these vicinities have taken unusual interest in these coming events, and have planted vegetables and made articles that they are looking forward to winning prizes with at the coming fairs.

The sound of the tramp of marching soldiers always appears to be irregular, even when all the feet are raised and set down at the same identical instant, with no soldier out of step. The apparent irregularity is because the sounds of the tramping proceed from different distances, and, though produced in unison, reach the listener's ears in varying periods of time.

DEATH LIST IN TORNADO SWEEP DISTRICT GROWS

HOUSTON, Texas, Sept. 17.—Figures compiled early today following interrupted wire communication with eight towns and cities along the tornado-swept Texas gulf coast placed the number of known dead, killed in the tornado which swept the Texas shore Sunday, at 252.

State and municipal authorities and relief workers say this number will be greatly increased as wire communication is re-established with numerous sparsely populated coast villages, which have been completely cut off from the outside world since Sunday.

Telephone and telegraphic communication with the storm region was restored temporarily during the night and from flashes received here the following list of dead was compiled:

Sinton, Texas, 75.
Portland, Texas, 55.
Corpus Christi, 47.
White Point, 29.
Rostia, 27.
Point Aransas, 4.
Aransas Pass, 4.
Rockport, 8.

A message reaching here during the night from Havana, Cuba, states that 30 persons lost their lives when the tidal wave struck that city.

AUTO DRIVER BADLY HURT WHEN BRAKES FAIL ON SINGER HILL

Delbert Boylan, employed as a driver for the delivery automobile of Eberly & Son, of this city, is suffering from severe wounds received while driving down the Singer hill in this city Tuesday morning.

Boylan had gone to the freight office of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company for a load of groceries for the firm, and had stopped at the Capital garage at Tenth and Railroad Avenue, when he found his automobile was giving him trouble. He was told by the proprietors that he would not be able to travel far, owing to the condition of the machine. He had gone but a short distance and he found the car refused to climb the hill. Turning the car near the McLaughlin home, on the Singer hill road, he attempted to drive the car back down the steep grade to have the necessary repairs made at the garage. The car gained rapid headway and the brakes refused to work. Boylan turned the car into the bank, and even this did not stop the car until it had gone almost to the bottom of the hill. Striking a rock, the automobile was turned completely over and Boylan was pinned under the car, causing a severe compound fracture of the leg, the bone protruding through the flesh. He is also suffering from a deep gash in the forehead, and a severe contusion of the left eye and his left shoulder blade is badly injured. Boylan was rendered unconscious. The automobile is a total wreck.

The man was taken to the Oregon City hospital, where his injuries were attended to by Drs. C. H. Meissner and E. Ross Eaton. The attending physicians have hopes for his recovery.

The accident was caused by the differential of the automobile breaking.

DEFINITE PLANS FOR PERMANENT ROADS DRAWN

Definite plans were launched Monday evening at a general road meeting of delegates from throughout the county to submit a bond issue of $1,700,000 to the people of Clackamas county within a short time for the purpose of building 144 miles of hard surfaced pavement.

The definite plans are the outgrowth of the movement started by the Commercial club several months ago. A committee of 12 from the club, known as the Twelve Road Disciples, have been working on the plan all summer. Proposed roads were designated and the plan of procedure, character of bonds and 17 recommendations to the county court were drawn up. At the meeting Monday evening, these plans were carefully gone over and several changes made in the proposed roads and recommendations.

Briefly, the plan is to vote on the issuance of 20-year, 5 per cent bonds in the amount of $1,700,000 to be spent only for hard surfaced roads, with the exception that wherever the grade will not permit a practical paved surface, that half of the roadway may have a surface upon which traction for horse drawn vehicles will be better. The roads to be paved are divided throughout the county, according to the amount of travel and necessity for permanent highways.

Among the recommendations to the county court is one that the county be divided into ten road districts to facilitate the preliminary work of road construction, as under the bonding act proposed, each district must prepare the roads and grade for the surface.

ROAD BOND COVERS 144 MILES OF PAVEMENT

If the circulation of petitions through the county districts indicate a favorable current toward the issuance of road bonds, a special election will be held in Clackamas county this fall to vote upon an issue aggregating $1,700,000 equal to 6 per cent of the assessed valuation of the county.

The good roads committee of the Commercial Club, headed by Dr. L. A. Morris, has been working for several months on a plan, and a temporary organization, with M. D. Latourette as chairman, and William B. Cook as secretary, has been formed to take charge of the preliminary arrangements incident to a bond election. The bond enthusiasts urge that Clackamas county can lay asphaltic-concrete pavement for $11,000 per mile, and that a bond issue of $1,700,000 will provide for 144 miles of hard surface, at a cost of $11,840,000, leaving $116,000 to be used toward the construction of a new bridge across the Willamette at Oregon City, where state aid has been promised to the extent of $100,000, and for the purchase of necessary paving equipment. It is the idea of the promoters that the grades shall be made by the districts through which the hard surfaced highways are laid out, and that the money from the sale of the bonds shall be used for pavement only, and it is shown by figures that the entire issue can be retired, under an annual tax levy of 5 mills, within 20 years, the interest payments totaling $1,135,000, or a total of $2,835,000 principal and interest, on the basis of 5 per cent bonds.

The organization will recommend to the county court that the county be divided into 10 road districts, as against 57 at present, each of the 10 districts to embrace the territory parallel and tributary to the particular roads specified for permanent improvement. It is hoped that the work may be started next Spring and the whole mileage be completed by January 1, 1924. The 10 road districts proposed, with the routes, total mileage and cost, are as follows:

1. Barlow to Monitor, 12 miles, $132,000.
2. Canby to Marquam, 7 miles, $77,000. Liberal to Mackburg, 5 miles, $55,000.
3. Oregon City to Kelland Hill, 2 miles, $22,000. Oregon City to McCord Hill, 3 miles, $33,000. Oregon City to Hog Hollow, 1 mile, $11,000.
4. Oregon City to Carus, 7 miles, $77,000. New Era to a point 2 miles south of Molalla, 13 miles, $143,000.
5. Oregon City to Schubel, Clarkes and Highland, 15 miles, $165,000.
6. Oregon City to Viola, 9 miles, $99,000.
7. Parkplace to Upper Logan, 13 miles, $143,000.
8. Logan to Barton and Estacada, 14 miles, $154,000.
9. Rock Creek to Boring, Damascus and Sandy, 14 miles, $154,000. Sandy to Orient, 5 miles, $55,000. Damascus to Multnomah county line, 5 miles, $55,000. Estacada to Springwater, 3 miles, $33,000.
10. Wilsonville to Oswego, 12 miles, $132,000. Stafford to Willamette, 4 miles, $44,000.

The scheme is yet in a formative stage, and its submission to the people at a special election will depend somewhat upon what kind of a reception greets the plan in its early stages. At a conference held here Monday night at the Commercial Club, delegations were present from many of the districts directly interested, and some changes in the routes were adopted. J. W. Reed and H. C. Stephens, of Estacada, left the meeting in high dudgeon because a majority of those at the conference declined to accede to their wishes concerning the route of the proposed highway leading away from Estacada, but after their departure the delegations adopted a resolution that practically overcomes the objections of the Eastern Clackamas contingent. Representative Schubel hotly declined to stand for a bond issue that did

Mr. Wilson's Address

Mr. Wilson's address at the auditorium in Portland Monday night was a disappointment, even to his devoted admirers. In the audience of 7,000 persons, there were many Doubting Thomases, who went with open minds, and came away without enlightenment and unconvinced. Not a few of the big audience expected to hear the President elucidate the disputed points in the peace treaty, but he never once mentioned the treaty, nor did he refer to a single section of it, devoting all of his address to the covenant of the League of Nations.

In his discussion of the League of Nations, the President again was a disappointment. His speech was general and not specific. He was plainly on the defensive, thus placing himself and his cause at a disadvantage. He was inclined to appeal to the hearts and emotions of his audience, rather than to their minds and to their calm reasoning. He reiterated his oft-repeated declaration that Germany would like the United States to reject the covenant, as drafted and presented, were in the hum class. Summing up, the President pointed out plainly that there is no alternative for the United States, and that we must accept the covenant as it stands or we shall not become a member of the League of Nations family, and in that latter event, the consequences will be dire. We fear Mr. Wilson made few converts in Portland.

The President failed to touch upon the section that gives to England and her dependent colonies six votes, to one vote for the United States, which section has been subjected to violent attack at the hands of members of the Senate, whose constitutional prerogative it is to ratify or to reject the covenant.

Mr. Wilson left alone the much discussed agreement with Japan over the Shantung peninsula. He passed up the treaty without a word, and left his audience with the reflection that the League of Nations is a true panacea for international evils and that if we should reject or amend the covenant, the labor of a half-century will be destroyed and be for naught.

As a social function and as a warm-hearted greeting from the people of Oregon to the President of the United States, the visit of Mr. Wilson to Portland was highly successful. The chief executive must have been gratified at the enthusiasm displayed over his coming.

TWO FATALITIES WHEN AUTOS SMASH DURING THE PRESIDENTS' TRIP

PORTLAND, Sept. 15.—Two men were killed and three others were injured when a high-powered Packard auto touring car attached to President Wilson's automobile highway party swerved into a ditch and overturned on the Powell Valley road, a mile and a half west of Gresham, shortly before 12 o'clock, noon, yesterday.

The two men killed, were Ben F. Allen, aged 39, Washington correspondent for the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and a member of the newspaper party attached to the president's special train.

Silk is the most costly of all fibres, and in raw state represents a value so great as to be guarded in its transportation like a shipment of bullion. It is shipped from coast to coast in special, solid, express trains, under strong guard, the shipments ranging in value from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000.

One of the newest uses of aluminum is its employment in making the soles of shoes to be used by workmen employed in damp and wet places. The aluminum-soled shoe lasts much longer than an ordinary shoe and it is said to be impervious to moisture.

PROMPT ACT OF DREDGE CAPTAIN SAVES 2 LIVES

The prompt act of Captain W. T. Reed, of the dredge Champoe, and several of the crew averted a double drowning in the Willamette river a short distance below the confluence of the Willamette and Clackamas rivers at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon when the canoe of Elmer E. Terrill capsized in the rapids at that point and Mr. Terrill and Harold Graves, who was with him, were thrown into the water.

Mr. Terrill sank a considerable distance under the water when the canoe capsized and upon gaining the surface found that Graves, who is unable to swim, had managed to retain his hold on the upturned canoe and was apparently in no danger of drowning. Terrill swam to the canoe, which had drifted in the swift current about a hundred yards below the point where it capsized, and as he swam he whistled, calling the attention of Captain Reed and crew, who were just eating dinner aboard the dredge. Just as he reached the canoe the last of the air which was confined beneath it and was supporting it escaped and the canoe commenced to sink.

The launch Salem, commanded by Captain E. A. Young, attempted to go to the rescue of the two canoists, but developed engine trouble. Captain Reed, realizing the dangerous plight of the two young men, put off from the dredge in a rowboat with Delta Culp, a young man working on the dredge, and reached the canoists within a few minutes after the canoe capsized. Their arrival a moment later would have doubtless have been too late to save the life of Graves, at least, as the canoe was sinking when the boys were pulled into the rowboat.

The two young men were taken on board the dredge, where they were dried out and given a good hot meal, and they were then brought up to Oregon City on the launch Salem. The canoe was recovered, the only loss reported being a canoe robe belonging to Mr. Terrill and a coat belonging to Mr. Graves.

The two young men were able to give their story to a representative of the Enterprise a short time after their accident and appeared to be none the worse for their narrow escape. Mr. Graves and Mr. Terrill were loud in their praise of the work of Captain Reed and his men and stated that full credit is due them for efficient manner in which they worked and the promptness with which they came to their rescue.

Mr. Terrill is an expert canoeist and has made the passage of the rapids, both upstream and down a number of times without trouble. He stated after the accident that he believed the fact that Mr. Graves, who weighs considerably more than he, and who sat in the bow position, weighed down the bow in a manner sufficient to make the canoe cranky in the rapids and eddies at the point where the accident occurred.

HEART FAILURE GIVEN AS CAUSE FOR DROWNING

Walter Oswald Hehn, son of John Hehn, prominent resident of the Lower Highland country was found dead Tuesday morning in four feet of water, in a pond near the Clear Creek Lumber Co.'s mill. An inquest was not held, although Coroner E. L. Johnson, of this city was summoned to the scene of the accident as also was Dr. R. G. McCall, of Estacada, who made an examination of the young man's body soon after being removed from the water. It is believed he was stricken with heart disease while crossing the saw logs in the pond.

Walter Hehn had been employed at the mill for but one week. He was working overtime at the mill Monday evening, and while conversing with one of the men having charge of the donkey engine said, "I believe I will go over and talk to the men at the mill." This was at 7:33 o'clock, and was the last seen of the young man.

He was missed Tuesday morning, and a search was made for his body, it being found in four feet of water.

Hehn was 19 years of age, and was born at Houston, Texas. He has resided in Clackamas county for 14 years.

The young man is survived by a sister, Mrs. Willis Hughes, of Beaver Creek, a small brother at Lower Highland, and his father.

Brady's undertaking parlors have charge of the funeral arrangements. The burial will be in the Clarkes cemetery.

The young man was well and favorably known in that section of the county, and had many friends, and had become popular among the mill employees.

The mill ceased operation until after the examination was made by the coroner and physician.

The Clear Creek Lumber Company is one of the largest in the county, employing 30 men, and is managed by Mr. DeMain.

ROOSEVELT ARRIVES IN PORTLAND; IS PLEASED

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., bustling actively as ever did his noted sire, arrived in Portland at 7:20 a. m. yesterday, at the end of an important leg in his journey through the United States in connection with and on behalf of the American Legion, national organization of American fighting men.

Escorted by Barge E. Leonard, vice chairman of the state legion organization, "Teddy" junior went immediately to the Multnomah hotel, where the first annual convention of the Oregon organization opened today.

"Pleased!" You bet I'm pleased with my western reception," Roosevelt announced to the comrades who greeted him this morning. And an echo of the much heralded Rooseveltian snap and punch carried over on his "pleased," with much the same effect that made his father, former president of the United States, known for his "delighted."

AMERICAN MANHOOD MUST SAVE THE NATION

President Wilson's visit to Oregon has passed into history. His reception was one that could not have failed to touch his heart. Oregon hospitality was at its best. Long before the hour appointed every seat in the auditorium was filled. While waiting the arrival of the presidential party they joined in singing "My Old Kentucky Home," "Star Spangled Banner" and other selections. The president's arrival was greeted with applause, the cheers lasting fully five minutes. Mayor Baker presided and led the audience in singing "The Star Spangled Banner." The president was introduced by B. F. Irvine, editor of the Oregon Journal, whose polished plea for an endorsement of the league laid a fitting foundation for the president's address. As a social function the president's reception was all that could be desired. His address was polished and scholarly. To the real seeker for new light on the treaty little was gained outside of what has already been published. Briefly the president paid his respects to the opponents of the league grilling Henry Cabot Lodge for his chanced attitude, and jocularly suggested that from his utterances in 1916 he had every reason to expect his support when it came to the question of the senate ratifying the treaty.

In defense of the league the president stated that a copy of every suggestion made at the conferences had been made and given careful attention. That in drafting the treaty and its consideration he had no thoughts of the election of 1920. That in preparing the treaty Germany had no hand, but when completed she was shown the line on which to sign, and it would set very ill on his stomach to take the treaty back to Germany for re-ratification. The desire was that no nation should dominate, not even this beloved nation of ours. The treaty was not made alone for the people of the United States but for all the free peoples of the world.

As a word painter the president is a past master. His pathetic story of the mother who had lost two sons in battle, who came to the train, clutched his hand and turned away in tears, while the president with eyes moist, said: "I ordered her sons away to war and she came to me with the hope that I might be able to save some other mother's sons." Thus did he elicit his arguments: "That if we want a League of Nations we must take this because I can see no conceivable way by which we can get another. We must take it or leave it. Concluding with: 'American manhood must save the nation.'

CLACKAMAS COUNTY GRANGE OPENS CO-OP STORE FOR FARMERS

The Clackamas County Grange association has opened up a co-operative store at Cherryville. The reason for this is the ever present high cost of living, and the farmers of that neighborhood are patronizing the new establishment to the limit. It is the purpose of the Grange to operate the store on a cost basis to farmers and members of the Grange, and to try and reduce the high cost of necessities. Several other stores are now being considered by the Grange in different parts of the county, and the plan is proving a complete success. Many complaints have come in from the farmers in this county on the excessive high prices of clothing.
