SUPREME COURT DIS-ALLOWS ATTORNEYS FEES IN GANONG CASE

A report received in this city late Tuesday afternoon was to the effect that the supreme court shortly after noon issued a decree modifying the decision of the circuit court of Clackamas county in the case of the State of Oregon versus J. W. Ganong, et al., striking out the item of $200 allowed by the lower court as attorney's fees.

The trial of the case of the State of Oregon vs. J. W. Ganong was filed with the County Clerk on June 19, 1918, as the result of condemnation proceedings which were instituted by the State Highway commission on a certain piece of property which it was necessary to purchase for a right of way of the Pacific highway a short distance south of Canemah. Mr. Ganong, with other owners of the property, claimed damages to the extent of $2,400 for the property taken, it being necessary to demolish a corner of an old barn and cut down a number of black walnut trees to clear the right of way.

The circuit court granted damages to the extent of $750 to the plaintiffs on condition that they give title to the disputed strip of right of way to the State Highway commission, which was done. On July 25, 1918, the State Highway commission appealed to the supreme court for $300 for attorney's fees in the case, and the decision of the higher court in modifying the decision of the lower court is for the purpose of disallowing the claim of the commission.

STEWART FAMILY IN LINN'S OLD MILL IS UNDER QUARANTINE

The three children of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Stewart, of Linn's Old Mill section, a few miles from Oregon City, are quarantined, suffering from smallpox. The mother, who is constantly caring for the children, is free from the disease so far, and the husband and another son are operating the farm, and are making their headquarters at a different place than those who are afflicted. With rigid care it is believed that other members of the family will not be afflicted.

Those suffering are Dorothy, aged 14 years; Dale, 13 years, and Anna Margaret, 17 months. It is believed that the family and others in the neighborhood have become affected with the disease by carelessness. A lad having been afflicted with the disease is reported by the neighbors to have had the desire of watching the threshers, and came from a home that was not quarantined, he himself having been exposed to the smallpox.

There have been a number of cases of smallpox in that section, according to reports, where they have not been properly quarantined, thus causing the disease to spread.
