COUNTER-PROPOSALS
ARE MADE FOR ROADS

It is evident from disclosures made Thursday that the proposed road bond issue of $1,700,000 in Clackamas county for paving roads is not going to have clear sailing. No less an institution than the county court has come forward with a counter proposal for a bond issue of $700,000, or less than half of the sum proposed by the road committee of the Commercial Club. The court proposes that the bonds shall be taken up in 20 years with a one mill levy for the first four years and a 2-mill levy for the remaining 16 years. The bonds would bear 5 per cent interest, requiring about $30,000 per annum for the period to pay the interest charges.

The club's proposal has already aroused the usual antagonism of those who live in sections not directly embraced within the paving mileage of Clackamas county totaling 144 miles. It is naturally subject to the attacks of those who are constitutionally opposed to road bonds and who prefer a "pay-as-you-go" system. Others contend that the scheme is faulty in that it does not provide for sufficient funds to construct a bridge across the Willamette at Oregon City, where there is a crying need for a new structure, and Representative Schuebel and C. E. Spence, master of the state grange, object to the provisions of the proposed issue on the ground that it is left to the judgment of the county court whether the county's own paving plants shall be utilized or whether the work shall be done by contract, or by both. Mr. Schuebel believes that this provision is a dangerous loophole and that it would be followed by an effort on the part of paving concerns to control the county court, a majority of which, in the form of a judge and one commissioner, are to be elected next year. Finally the time limit for the expenditure of the money, January 1, 1924, is said to be so short that the court would be compelled to resort to the contract system in order to obey the injunction of the voters in this respect.

Under the plan of the county court, $100,000 would be used for the new bridge, $100,000 for road equipment, $100,000 for the Pacific Highway grade and $100,000 a year for four years, for permanent roads, making a total of $700,000, but it is not specified in this scheme where the roads are to go, neither is it stipulated that all of the money is to be spent for pavement. In connection with the county court's plan, it is shown that the county has an income from its road levy of $235,000 per annum, and it is proposed to throw this into the general fund, deny to road districts their 70 per cent to which they are entitled out of the road fund, and to distribute the money in this fashion: Permanent roads and state co-operation, $100,000; road districts, $50,000; interest on bonds, $30,000; bridges and culverts, $65,000. Such a program, argues the court, will give the county $200,000 per annum for permanent road work, half of which will come from general taxation and half from the bond issue for four years.

The conflicting plans have brought to the surface the "pay-as-you-go" people, who say the court's plan will not provide sufficient funds and that if bonds are to be issued, the county should go the limit of 6 per cent of its assessed valuation. It is proposed, however, as an alternative plan, that there be submitted to the people a plan to levy an additional 5 mills for 10 years, and that for the first three years $50,000 shall be placed in the Willamette river bridge fund each year, $25,000 in an equipment fund each year, leaving $75,000 per year for permanent road work, and for the remaining seven years the total of $150,000 per annum could be expended in highway work, giving the roads a total of $1,275,000 in 10 years. If the present road levy is maintained, there would be a further sum of $2,350,000 available in the 10 year period, and the county would have no indebtedness.

F. Madden, a merchant of Springfield, was in Oregon City Thursday and protested against the Springfield link as outlined in the $1,700,000 proposed bond issue, going into Estacada. He says his people had no opportunity for representation at last Monday's conference, and that they prefer to join the proposed highway along the south bank of Clackamas, running into Oregon City.

OREGON DAIRY PRODUCTS ARE SHIPPED TO ALASKA.

Portland Sept. 19.—Dairy products worth more than $100,000 are going from Oregon to Alaska this year, marking the first season in nearly a decade that Portland produce dealers have obtained a grip on the Northern trade.

More than 1600 cases of eggs, 40,000 pounds of butter and large quantities of cheese have already been sent to Alaskan ports and local firms have received a number of contracts for eggs to be supplied to the Alaskan Engineering commission. Puget Sound dealers have controlled this market for a number of years but the advantage given Portland dealers this year makes them confident that that trade will develop to large proportions in ensuing seasons.

OLDTIME TRAPPER SHOWS PROWESS IN DEER HUNTING TRIP

W. E. Frazier and F. D. Hilton, of Springfield, passed through Oregon City a few days ago on their way to their home from a hunting trip into the mountains from their home by automobile and visited some of the wildest country while on their hunting trip. Elkton was the destination of the two men and the mountain home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hancock was visited, the men making their headquarters there.

It was while visiting this home that Mr. Hancock, who is one of the old time trappers acted as guide for the Clackamas county men. This old gentleman, who is 69 years of age is still a crack shot, and proved his ability when accompanying Frazier and Hilton. It was in the wildest section they were visiting, and where big game abounds, that Hancock spied a deer. He knelt down placed the gun into position and fired, a distance of about 1000 yds. His aim was good, and called to the other hunters, "I believe I hit the deer in the neck." The men ran to the spot and sure enough the animal was struck where the old hunter had said, and this is but one instance where the old timer took aim with his gun and shot the hit mark he was aiming for.

The old trapper told many interesting tales of his early life in the southern part of the state. He crossed the plains with his parents in the early days, when he was three years of age. Growing to manhood and with his brother engaged in trapping, and their trappings in two months amounted to $496, and many months of each year they succeeded in making similar sums from their work.

Hancock's 24-year-old daughter, a most attractive girl with wonderful hair, her two long braids extending far below her waist, is remaining at home in that wild section caring for an invalid mother. She attended school in Southern Oregon but owing her mother's illness her assistance is needed in the little home. This young woman has followed in the footsteps of her father in securing big game, and the old father is proud of a photo of his daughter showing the first animal she shot, a large mountain lion that had been giving the settlers much trouble until it was shot by the girl. This animal was killed when the girl was thirteen years of age, and since that time she has been able to keep such wild beasts from prowling around the Hancock home.

Miss Hancock is contented at the little home of the early settler but always gives the hunters visiting the Hancock home a most cordial welcome. Frazier and Hilton were among those received by the family, and are planning to return next fall, when Mrs. Frazier will also make the trip, this to be her first hunting trip.

Frazier and Hilton each got a deer and brought home some of the venison. Much country was traveled over in the Frazier car and some of the roads were in poor condition but the trip was made without tire trouble, and was one of the most enjoyable outings ever taken by these two men.

Mr. Frazier is one of the most prominent stockmen of Clackamas county, specializing in sheep.

NEGLECT OF DUTY IN LOGGING OPERATIONS
ENDANGERS AUTOISTS

As a result of a breach in an oral agreement entered into between Roadmaster Compton and Junke Bros., several days ago covering logging operations near Baker's bridge the latter were ordered to report to County Judge Anderson in an effort to arrange for a bond to cover their operations at that point.

According to the agreement with Roadmaster Compton, Junke Bros. were granted permission to operate a logging cable across the highway near Baker's bridge for the purpose of snaking logs from one side of the highway to the other. It was understood in the agreement that Junke Bros. had agreed to maintain guards at the point where the logs were being hauled across the highway to safeguard traffic on the roadway and that it was discovered that they had neglected to provide the guards, and by their neglect were endangering all traffic which passed that point.

Upon being informed of their neglect, Roadmaster Compton ordered them to suspend operations until such time as they arranged a bond satisfactory to the County Court and which would safeguard the county in case of lawsuits arising from possible accidents arising from the logging operations. It was further stipulated that the bond should cover all damage done to the highway itself at that point where the logs were being hauled across the highway, as it was discovered that the highway was suffering damage through the logging operations.

The palace of Versailles, the scene of the signing of the world peace treaty, is probably the most costly palace ever built. In order to keep the outlay a secret, Louis XVI. destroyed all the documents relating to the building.

RETURNED SOLDIER
REPORTED MISSING AND SEARCH STARTED

John Fields, a returned soldier, having seen active service in France, is missing, and his relatives, including a sister, Mrs. George Walter, of Estacada, and another sister, Mrs. Carrie Coose, of Hillsboro, Route 3, have been making inquiries throughout Clackamas county during the past two weeks in an effort to locate him.

Fields entered the service in 1917, enlisting in Montana, and owing to illness was in the hospital for some time, not sailing for France until 1918. He was stationed for some time at Fort Riley, Kansas, and was with the 42nd Division while in France. He suffered from injuries received in battle, which caused deafness, and it was necessary for him to undergo an operation on his head while in the service. The scar remains over the left ear as an identification mark. He is described as being about five feet, seven inches in height, having dark hair and blue eyes, and weighs about 150 pounds.

The young man had visited his sister at Estacada, and had secured employment on the road work for about six days, when he was laid off on account of rain. He decided to make his temporary home in Estacada and had visited at the home of Mr. Githens, an old time friend, on June 17, and told Mr. Githens he was to visit his sister, and to remain there for a while. He was seen to board the car at Miller's Spur on the Estacada line, and this was the last seen of him. Mr. Githens says he had money on his person, and it is feared by relatives that he has met with some mishap.

He was formerly employed in the forest service, and every effort to locate him has proved futile. The family now seek the assistance of the Red Cross and the newspapers in trying to locate the ex-soldier.

Fields is the son of Mr. J. K. Fields, of Yamhill county. He also has a sister there, Mrs. G. C. Houtenburg.

Any information as to his whereabouts will be greatly appreciated by the anxious family, and informants can telephone or write Mrs. George Walter, of Estacada or to Mrs. Carrie Coose, of Hillsboro, Route 3, who returned to her home from Estacada Friday afternoon.

SCHOOLS OF CITY
START YEAR WITH MORE THAN 1,000

The schools of Oregon City opened the fall term Monday morning with a total enrollment of 1050, which is about fifty more than the high mark of the 1918-1919 term.

The greatest increase in students is reported from the high school, in which fifty more students more than last term enrolled for the coming term at the opening hour Monday.

In a statement issued Monday afternoon City Supt. Kirk declared that the first day's enrollment far exceeded the most conservative estimate and that there is every indication of a considerable further increase during the balance of the week.

A considerable percentage of the new students are enrolled from outlying districts tributary to Oregon City and this enrollment has far exceeded the expectations of the school officials.

A report current during the latter part of the week to effect that a shortage of text books existed and that it would be impossible for all students to secure the necessary books for the term has been refuted, superintendent Kirk stating that all students have been able to secure their full complement, with the exception of one or two books of which supply was not quite sufficient to supply all pupils. This shortage is accounted for by the fact that the enrollment in the classes using these particular text books has so far exceeded the previous estimates that the orders placed with the book dealers considered ample exhausted. A duplicate order has been placed and the necessary books will in all probability be available by the time the school work is fully under way.

The enrollment of the different schools of the city on the first day is given as follows:

Eastham School	296
Barclay School	298
Oregon City High School	362
Total	1056

LOCAL MELON GROWER
HARVESTS BIG CROP
FROM SMALL ACREAGE

That watermelons can be successfully grown in Clackamas county is proven by E. A. Hackett, of Greenpoint Addition. Tuesday morning he harvested and marketed two tons of fine melons from his gardens and a few days before leaving on his hunting trip harvested two tons. Before the season closes he expects to harvest that many more. One of the inducements of purchasing melons from Mr. Hackett is that he guarantees all melons, and if any are not as recommended he makes them good. Several varieties of musk melons are grown on the three acres of land at the Hackett home.

The melons are carefully watched at night and if melon thieves make their appearance at the garden they get a very warm reception.

Although Mr. Hackett has grown melons for the past ten years, this is the largest crop he has ever harvested.

In Korea if a man meets his wife in the street he ignores her presence and passes on as if she were a stranger.

More Roosevelt

"If a man isn't willing to die for this country, by George, he shan't be allowed to live off this country." Here we have a characteristic Rooseveltism, uttered in a speech at the auditorium in Portland Wednesday night by a young man who has many of his famous father's mannerisms and who evidently possesses the force and stalwart Americanism of one of our greatest men.

The preaching of Americanism is needed in this country, and no better vehicle can be secured than the men who volunteered to fight for the principles that led us to take an army of millions to Europe. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt points out that the I. W. W. question, the red flag danger and the anarchistic propaganda are not academic questions and should be treated with force and promptness.

The true patriotic American ring of Roosevelt's speech is in happy contrast to that other address in the auditorium this week, that dealt in glittering generalities, vague hopes and internationalism.

Give us more men like young Roosevelt and we shall have a better and healthier national feeling in this country.

ROAD BOND ISSUE WINS
DEPUTY HACKETT IS HIGH GUN IN PARTY AND GETS TWO DEER

"We want good roads and we want 'em right away."

This was the 100 per cent idea manifested at an enthusiastic meeting of farmers from every section of Clackamas county Monday night, when two plans were submitted for their consideration, one endorsing a bond issue of $1,700,000 for the construction of 144 miles of hard surfaced roads, and authorizing $116,000 for the Oregon City-West Lin suspension bridge and for the purchase of equipment, and the other to carry out substantially the same program with a direct 5-mill tax levy annually for 10 years.

By the decisive vote of 124 to 13 the farmers demanded early construction of the paving proposed, declining to wait for the longer period covered by the millage proposal. The meeting went on record by a unanimous vote in favor of the county being divided into 11 road districts, the roads in one of which are permanently improved for the most part, and the other 10 districts following along and being tributary to the roads designated in the bonding plan. The committee of 30, consisting of three from each of the proposed districts, was authorized to meet in Oregon City on Wednesday night and definitely determine the roads to be improved and to take charge of the elaboration of the bonding plan. It is probable the committee will make few changes in the routes adopted last week.

The millage plan, generally known as the pay-as-you-go scheme, had its defenders, and was stoutly advocated by Charles E. Spence, master of the state grange; E. P. Carter, former representative in the legislature, and Walter P. Kirchem, of Logan. Representative Schuebel was called upon by M. D. Latourrette, the chairman, to present the tax idea, and he made a fair presentation of both plans. The overwhelming sentiment in favor of the bonding plan developed early in the meeting, with ardent speeches from O. D. Eby, Rev. Carl J. Renhardt, of Colton, W. P. Tallman, of Clarkes, J. W. Exon, of Monitor, G. J. Taylor, of Molalla, J. C. Robinson, of Canby, Frantz Kraxberger, of Mackburg, H. O. Stephens, of Estacada, B. T. McRahn, of West Linn, and E. W. Bartlett, of Estacada.

Changes of location were urged by John M. Mann, city commissioner of Portland, representing the Bull Run district, and by M. Justin, for Willbut. If the sentiment expressed at the Monday night's meeting is reflective of that from the county generally, there is every probability that Clackamas county will vote bonds for hard surfaced roads to the extent of the constitutional limitation at a special election to be held as soon as it can be called, certainly within the next 60 days.

Among the Clackamas county boys having filed their discharge papers in the office of County Recorder Noye recently are Carl H. Johnson, who is a native of Sweden, enlisting November 28, 1917, at Vancouver Barracks, Wash. Among the battles in which he was engaged were the Alsne, Marne, Vesle River sector, St. Mihiel and Meuse Argonne. He served in France, Luxembourg, Lorraine and Germany.

Robert Fairfax Myers, who served from December 14, 1917, and recently returned to Oregon City from the navy, where he followed the occupation of radio operator, is among the boys registering and who have left for Corvallis, where he will take up his studies at the Oregon Agricultural College.

cently filed his discharge papers in John J. Stiner, a native of Ehrenbach, Germany, who enlisted in the United States Army at the age of 50 years. He is a painter by occupation, and when Uncle Sam called for men for the service, this man was one of the first to respond to the country's call. He entered the service at Portland, Ore., and went across the seas with Base Hospital No. 208. He received his discharge at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Griffith Jones, who entered the service September 7, 1917, at Cathlamet, Wash., was in the Alsne, Marne, St. Mihiel, Meuse Argonne, Vesle engagements.

Just Back From Paris,
Urges Japan to Work for a Lasting Peace

Cable dispatches state that Marquis Saloni, former premier and head of the Japanese delegation at the peace conference, just after his return to Tokyo urged his country to "help consolidate a lasting peace based upon the principles of right and justice." He said that the real national ideals of Japan are entirely opposed to militarism and aggression. He spoke at a luncheon given in his honor, which was attended by the premier and members of the cabinet.

CLACKAMAS BREEDER OF FANCY CATTLE TO SHOW STOCK AT FAIR

A. D. Gribble, one of Clackamas county's prominent breeders of livestock, whose home is near Canby, was among the Oregon City visitors Monday. Mr. Gribble visited among some of his old time Oregon City friends before returning to his home.

Mr. Gribble is contemplating entering three Jerseys at the Clackamas county fair. He has owned one of the largest and best herds of Jerseys in the county for a number of years but has disposed of all except the three he is to exhibit. His cattle have brought some of the highest prices at sales and shows. One sold at the Naef sale was raised by Mr. Gribble and brought $525. This was Golden Line. Another cow bringing top prices at the Beaver Creek sale held last spring was Malinda of Lone Oak farm, bringing $450. Another brought $360. Among the cows raised by Mr. Gribble was Victoria Belle Plymouth, who has averaged over 53 pounds of fat for the last five months with an average test of 5.65 per cent. She was the daughter of Norma's Marigold. The cow was sold to T. M. Lamonde of Wolf Creek, Oregon, who is the present owner.

Mr. Gribble is also engaged in raising Oxford Down sheep and is to have about ten head of his sheep at the coming Clackamas county fair.

The nose-kiss exists in races so far apart as the Eskimos of the Arctic region and the Maoris of New Zealand.

SHERIFF WILSON IS ONE BUSY MAN; LONGS FOR VACATION JAUNT

There is no busier man in Clackamas county than Sheriff William (Billy) Wilson and he is one of the men longing for a much needed vacation. He has been especially busy during the absence of his deputy, E. A. Hackett, who is in the mountains looking for big game of which he has promised a portion (if he gets any) to the big sheriff when he returns for letting him have two weeks off.

It was during the busiest day a few days ago that a woman called (long distance call at that) to Sheriff Wilson and in excited tones said "someone has stolen my child." Wilson had just seated himself to take a few needed breaths, and had a few spare ones left to give the anxious mother an answer. "When did they steal your child, replied Wilson. Just a few minutes ago, and the parties have taken her away in a big black touring car." "Are you sure they have stolen her," said the sheriff. "Yes, she is gone, and I have searched for her, and cannot find her."

While Wilson was gasping for another breath, the woman called out in more excited tones, "I see a big black car coming down this way and perhaps they have her, and I will let you know." All afternoon Wilson waited for the call, but none came so the sheriff came to the conclusion that a friend of the family had taken the child for a short drive to try the big black car.

This is but one instance that has occurred in the office of the sheriff, and if there isn't a vacation forth coming soon, when he can rest for one day and forget about babies being lost and distilleries being operated in the county Sheriff Wilson says he will be as grey as a badger but he does not know whether a sheriff gets a vacation or not, but hopes so, and will try for one for a few days when Hackett returns and see how it goes.

OVERLOADING TRUCK ON HIGHWAY BRINGS
DRIVER MUCH GRIEF

A warrant was issued in the Sheriff's office Friday morning for the arrest of W. F. Jubb, a private trucking contractor of Portland, on the charge of violating the state ordinance in regard to operating overloaded trucks on the state highways. It is charged that Jubb was hauling four and one-half tons of slabwood on a truck of two ton capacity.

Jubb, who has a wood-hauling contract from a sawmill near Baker's bridge to Portland, attempted Thursday afternoon to pass over a newly gravelled stretch of roadway under construction by the county paving crew and his truck became stalled. Instead of backing onto the finished grade as he was instructed to do, he unloaded a portion of his load and left it alongside the road at the point where his truck became stalled in the gravel. The fact of an apparent overloading of the truck became apparent to officials of the road crew working nearby and the issuing of the warrant for his arrest followed.

It is reported that Jubb made the statement to one of the road officials that he would wait until the paving was finished and that he would then return and tear up the paving faster than they could lay it.
