ON HOME TRADE

The subject of trade-at-home has been so thoroughly threshed out in all parts of the country within the past few years, and especially in Oregon City, where trade-at-home is a reality rather than a dream, that further discussion would seem unnecessary. Still, there are many thousands of dollars going outside Clackamas county each year that the condition is appalling.

Few of those who send their money away from home for the goods that can usually be bought as cheaply within a short distance of their own door, do not realize what their thoughtlessness means. The essence of the result is the upbuilding of Chicago and the tearing down of Clackamas county and the several communities therein. Chicago's mastery of trade, her huge mercantile institutions and her great trade fields are structure of thoughtlessness; they are monuments built of the dollars that home merchants are entitled to and for which they are making a sincere bid; they are testimonials to the damage done by a lack of cooperation among the buyers of just such communities as are found in Clackamas county.

Chicago sends very few dollars back to Clackamas county. Instead, it builds with them great factories, great wholesale houses and the greatest mail order business systems in the world. Chicago does not preach co-operation. The mail order business is cooperation's greatest enemy. The mail order business crowds out the cross roads store, it crowds out the village grocery and dry-goods merchant and it prys its wedges under the foundations of the business of the larger communities.

"Don't knock the town that's feeding you," is a line in the parody on a popular song. Yet that very thing is being done by hundreds of Clackamas county people. Every dollar sent outside the county for goods that could be bought at home is a direct knock at the town and the county that is feeding you. Pause a moment to consider whether it is better to spend your dollars in upbuilding the source of your own livelihood or to spend them where they will further strengthen the mail order houses that are tearing down this county. Individuals are the masters of the business fate of their communities. As individuals stop patronizing mail order houses and spend their money at home, just so soon will the county and the communities therein prosper and grow larger. All the talk of all the trade experts and all the work on the part of civic clubs is unavailing if the individual refuses to cooperate by keeping his own money at home.

THE COMMISSION

The Lawyer and Banker, the name of which designates its field in class journalism, assumes a tone a voice a bit out of the ordinary in stating its opinion regarding the value of the service rendered to the nation by the Interstate Commerce commission. In expressing this opinion editorially the Lawyer and Banker says:

Where will the railroads of the United States be in a few years unless they are afforded relief from a situation which has brought one-sixth of their mileage into the hands of receivers?

This is not said without the admission that in isolated cases, there has been mismanagement which has resulted in the wrecking of certain well located properties but it is pertinent to remark in this connection that every particle of wrongdoing has been perpetrated since the creation of the Interstate Commerce commission and it might be well to ask why it was not prevented or at least exposed, before it came to the point of complete demoralization.

The people have had an object lesson on the tariff and they have made up their minds that the present one is not beneficial to the prosperity of the country. In certain sections, the gradually depreciating character of railroad service has taught those who live there that the railroad problem is nearly, if not quite as important, as the tariff. When the rest of the country wakes up to the same fact, something will be done.

The piratical attacks on railway corporations by "the dear people" remind us of a party of joy seekers rocking a small boat while out of sight of land.

Is it fair to assume that the man who has been a life failure at whatever business he has undertaken would be a brilliant success of president or general manager of a great transportation company?

Wherein is the difference between the government compelling the railways to carry the mails at an unfair rate—or a loss—and the highwayman who holds up the individual at the point of a gun and takes his pocketbook?

The man who honestly believes that seven men composing the Interstate Commerce commission are wise enough to formulate plans for the successful operation of all the railways in the United States reminds us of the blind man who started out with a tallow dip to locate Diogenes.

NEW HISTORY

Historically unprecedented is the condition of national administration which is to be brought about at Washington next spring by the retirement of Woodrow Wilson as president of the United States and the temporary elevation of Robert Lansing, secretary of state, to that honorable position. Mr. Wilson has nine chances of a possible ten for re-election, but that does not alter the fact that Mr. Lansing is to be the next president of the nation. The means by which Mr. Lansing will be entitled to presidential honors is described in an eastern exchange. It is new in the history of government in the United States. Our contemporary says:

"Who will be the next president of the United States? Robert Lansing. But it isn't necessary to get excited about it. It's a fact, but a fact that needn't upset the campaign plans of any candidate. The secretary of state isn't in politics at all, and isn't likely to be. No convention is going to nominate him. He isn't going to be elected. Nevertheless, he'll be the next president, and this is the way of it."

A law enacted in 1886 provides that whenever the president and vice-president are both unable for any reason to perform the duties of the executive office, the secretary of state shall act as president. President Wilson's term expires at noon March 4, 1917. That is Sunday. It's contrary to precedent, although not illegal, to hold an inauguration on Sunday. It is planned, therefore, to have it on Monday, March 6. And so for one day Secretary Lansing will be president. He will be empowered to occupy the White House if he chooses, issue pardons, command the army and navy, and even to ride to the capitol as the outgoing president in the inauguration ceremonies. It will be the first time a secretary of state has ever had such an honor, and the second time the office has ever been held by any one except the president or vice-president."

WASTING WATER

The city has not ordered the street cleaning department to sprinkle Main street at the proper hour. The work is done after nightfall when all benefit from the dust-settling and the cooling influence of the spray from the sprinkling cart is lost. In the meantime the throngs go forward in the blazing sun, mopping their brows between curses at the heat waves from the asphalt, and breathing the dust that the breezes blow through the air.

There seems to be absolutely no excuse for the wasteful and foolish plan of sprinkling streets after night. The time for such a thing to be done is during the morning hours or in the early afternoon when the conditions for which sprinkling carts were invented to correct exist; not at night when the atmosphere is plenty cool enough for those who sally forth after dark.

Many times the sprinkling cart has just made its rounds when the street flushing hose is brought into use, thereby rendering the sprinkling valueless and causing a waste of water that is not inconsiderable.

If the city council does not care to recognize the mistake that is being made by the street department the merchants who lose the benefit of the water they pay for should remonstrate. Their store fronts and the stocks on the inside would present a much better appearance, perhaps, if the sprinkling was done at the proper time.

CONFIRMED

The Coquille Sentinel, which has been a staunch advocate of the confirmation of the appointment of Louis D. Brandeis to the supreme court bench, is happy in the light of senate's recent approval of the president's selection for the honorable position. Of the confirmation the Sentinel says:

It is scarcely an exaggeration to say that Brandeis has revolutionized the spirit of our constitutional law by his arguments before the supreme court. Up to his day the law was a dry, dehumanized, purely mathematical science taking no account of the vicissitudes of men, caring nothing for the burdens of those who toiled. Brandeis has taught the desiccated legalists that social facts must be taken into account.

The constitution which seeks to "provide for the common welfare" cannot ignore the consequence of over-work and long hours upon the mothers of the race nor can it permit the ruthless slaughter of the new generation to coin profits for a few millionaires. Brandeis has made the constitution from which flows our highest law a living spring of beneficent power. He found it binding the genius of the people with iron clamps. He has made it a living garment clothing the nation as Goethe says the Creator is clad by the infinite tissue of His works.

After the war is over, in Europe as in Chicago, the question will arise: "What principle were we fighting for, anyway?"

News item from Chicago: The task of writing the Republican tariff plank has been assigned to that eminent Republican statesman, General K. Lamity.

Since 1912 the bank deposits of this country have increased 35 per cent—a very practical expression of confidence in democratic banking law and administration.

The day following the passage of the democratic shipping bill by the House, the foreign shipping trust lowered ocean rates from American ports to all foreign markets.

The $240,000,000 navy voted by the democrats leaves T. R. with only one issue unappropriated, and that is the recall of judicial opinions. And as Hughes refused to express an opinion, even that issue did not count.

This is the year which will decide whether the 4,000,000 progressives of 1912 were progressives for principle or for loaves and fishes. What was practicable of their principles has been put into constructive measures by Woodrow Wilson.

Although the farms of the United States are valued at $40,000,000,000 and produce $10,000,000,000 of annual wealth, they have had to pay an interest rate of from 6 per cent to 10 per cent. A democratic congress and administration passes a rural credits act which will reduce this rate to 4 per cent to 6 per cent. Will the 6,000,000 farmers of the United States endorse this act with their votes in November?

In 1853 she came to Oregon via the Isthmus of Panama route, and joined her husband, who has preceded her to Oregon City, where they later took up a claim. For some years they resided in Oregon City, but in the early '60s removed to Salem, remaining there until 1870, when they came to Portland. Mr. Moore died 17 years ago, since which time Mrs. Moore had made her home with her daughter and only child, Mrs. D. G. Tomasini.

August Zindler

August Zindler, well-known resident of the Clackamas Heights district, died at a Portland hospital on Tuesday from the effects of cancer. Mr. Zindler was born in 1877 and had lived at Clackamas Heights for a number of years. He is survived by a brother and sister, who live at Clackamas Heights. Funeral services were conducted in Oregon City on Wednesday, interment being in Mountain View cemetery. The Rev. William Kraxberger officiated.

Allen Orlo Hayward

Died—June 14 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. W. Casto, Allen Orlo Hayward, of hardening of the arteries.

A. O. Hayward was born in East Alstead, New Hampshire, Dec. 11, 1843. In 1845 his parents removed to South Acworth. In 1869 he accompanied the family to Oberlin, Ohio. Here he met and in 1872 married Mattie L. Callahan.

In 1879 Mr. and Mrs. Hayward with two children emigrated to Kansas, settling at Rock Creek. In 1888 he was compelled by failing health to try another climate, and with his wife and four children he came to Oregon. He first located on a farm at Carus, later lived two and a half years in Oregon City. In 1903 he moved to Clackamas.

He is survived by the widow, a son, Eugene Hayward, two daughters, Mrs. C. W. Casto, Mrs. R. B. Holcomb and five grandchildren.

Edward Johnson

Funeral services for Edward Johnson, who was killed by a railroad train in Washington last Wednesday, were conducted on Friday and interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

Mr. Johnson, aged 74 years at the time of the accident which took his life, was a veteran of the civil war. He enlisted in the union army at the age of 19 as a private in the 88th New York volunteer infantry, a division of the famous "Irish Brigade." He soon advanced in rank and when General Meagher led his historic charge against Walton's confederate battery on Marye's Heights in the battle of Fredericksburg, Sergeant Johnson was one of the 251 of the original total of 1315 men who were in the charge.

Mr. Johnson's funeral was attended by many of the members of Meade Post, G. A. R. He is survived by a son, Edward, of Puyallup, Wash., where Mr. Johnson lost his life, and by a son, Joseph, who lives in this state.

Mrs. Henry Koehler

Mrs. Louise M. Koehler, wife of Henry Koehler of Oswego, passed away at the family home on Monday night after an extended illness. Death was hastened by an attack of meningitis. Mrs. Koehler had been confined by the most recent attack for a week.

Mrs. Louise M. Koehler was born in Belgium on February 4, 1889 and had been a resident of Oregon for a number of years, where her husband has been prominent in politics. She is survived by her husband, who is at present city recorder and deputy assessor at Oswego; a son, Willie, aged 14, and Constance, a daughter, aged 3. Mrs. Koehler's father, Joseph J. Van Duyse, lives at Oswego, and a brother, P. J. Van Duyse, is in Portland.

Funeral services will probably be conducted from the residence at Oswego on Sunday. The body is at the Myers & Brady parlors.

Mrs. W. C. Wilson

Mrs. W. C. Wilson died at her home in Gladstone this morning as a result of severe burns received on Monday when she threw a lighted match upon a can of benzine, which exploded and set fire to her clothing. The accident together with the illness brought about by cancer, caused Mrs. Wilson's sudden and very sad death.

Burns from the benzine flames spread from the elderly lady's knees to her neck and her screams for help perhaps are responsible for saving her from instant death at the time of the accident. She had been in the woodshed with a lighted match and when she dropped the match, thinking its flame extinguished, it fell upon the benzine. Neighbors attracted by the screams of the injured woman, put the flames out, but their effort claimed toll this morning. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

Richard Dundas

The death of Richard Dundas at the family home at Mount Pleasant on Wednesday was a sudden shock to the many friends of the elderly gentleman, who had lived in Clackamas county for a number of years.

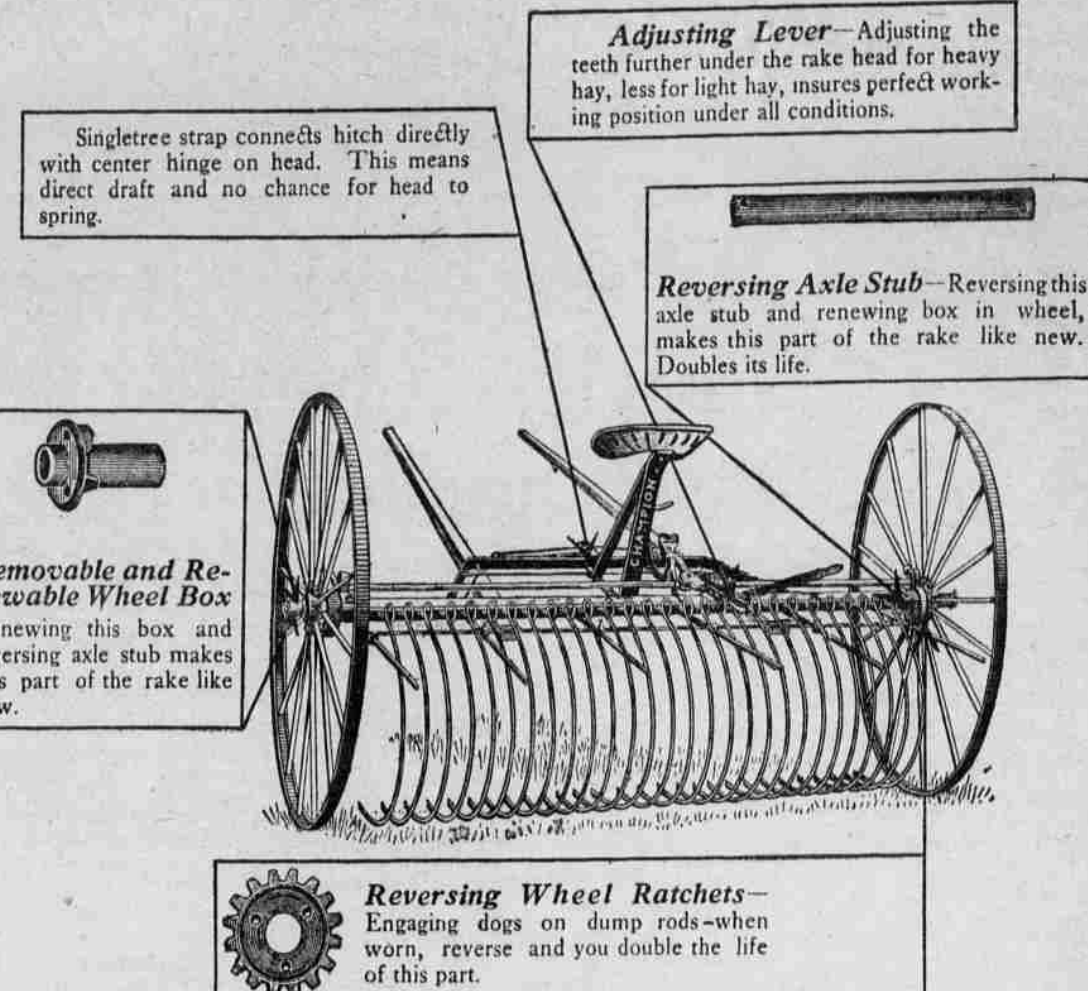

Mr. Dundas was born in Belfast, Ireland, September 10, 1846, and moved with his parents to Canada two years after his birth. He had been a resident of Oregon since 1875. He was married to Miss Bessie Norton in 1884 and is survived by the widow in addition to the following children: Mrs. Charlotte Blanchard, Mrs. Maude Inalls, of this county; Mrs. Lela Norton, Stockton, Cal.; Mrs. Mamie McFarland, Oak Point, Wash.; Mrs. Mattie Engle, Miss Zelma Dundas and Miss Violet Dundas, who reside on the home farm at Mount Pleasant.

Funeral services will be conducted on Friday morning at 11 o'clock from the Central Point church and interment will be in Mountain View.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation."—Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.
