

Doughnuts

That will remain moist.

Every housewife who bakes her own bread knows that a little potato, added to the sponge, the bread will not dry out as quickly. In this recipe potato is utilized to make doughnuts that will remain moist and fresh for several days.

K C will be found to have distinct advantages over any other Baking Powder for doughnuts. K C is a double acting baking powder with which a large batch of doughnuts may be mixed and fried a few at a time. The last will be as light and nice as the first.

K C Potato Doughnuts

By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, of Baking School fame.

3 cups flour; 2 eggs; 1 cup sugar; 1 level teaspoonful K C Baking Powder; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; 1/2 teaspoonful water; 1 cup cold mashed potato; 1 cup milk, or more if needed.

Sift three times, the flour, salt, and baking powder. Beat eggs with rotary beater, then still using rotary beater, gradually add sugar, then work in the mashed potato with a spoon and alternately add milk and flour mixture. Make a soft dough, roll into a sheet, cut into rounds, pinch a hole in the center with the finger and fry in deep fat.

Fat for frying should not be hot enough to brown the doughnut until it has risen. When the doughnut is dropped into the fat it sinks to the bottom. As soon as it comes up it should be turned and turned a number of times while cooking. This recipe is excellent as they do not take the fat in frying and will stay moist for days.

NEW ROAD OPENED

Parkplace Road Surface, Laid by County, is Completed

The road between Oregon City and Parkplace, paved by the county, under the direction of county employees and with county tools and implements, was opened to travel yesterday. The road is the first to be surfaced in this county by the county itself, and is the first in which paving contractors have not had a hand.

The new road is paved with a five-inch surface of asphaltic concrete, which will probably not cost the county more than 60 cents a yard, net. The cost of the installation of the paving plant at Parkplace, purchased outright last week from the owners, will bring the final cost of the Parkplace road surface up to approximately 75 cents a yard.

The county court has outlined the summer's work for its paving crew, under the direction of Harry Worswick. The plant will be moved to Milwaukie, where the Milwaukee-Sellwood road is to be surfaced. Later a two-mile stretch of the 82nd street road from Portland will be surfaced. Before the plant is moved from its present location, however, a section of the Redlands road is to be repaved and the alley in the court house square will be paved. Work on each of these has already been started.

COMMITTEE ELECTS

County Central Committee Plan Banquet for July

At the meeting of the Democratic County Central committee held on Thursday afternoon Harvey G. Starkweather was elected chairman, with Earl C. Latourette secretary and J. E. Jack, treasurer.

The meeting was brief and consisted principally of the election of officers and the completion of the organization of the committee which includes in its membership committee-men from the 82 precincts of the county. The meeting was well-attended.

A banquet is planned by the committee to be held next month, at which time the various candidates for political honors at the fall election will address democrats from all parts of the county. Details for the banquet will be announced later by a special committee in charge of the affair.

NO INTEREST CHANGE

Local Bankers Will Not Follow Lead of Portland Depositories

According to local bankers, expression coming through LeRoy D. Walker of The Bank of Commerce, Oregon City and Clackamas county banks will not follow the lead of Portland savings banks by reducing the rate of interest on savings deposits from 4 to 3 per cent.

Mr. Walker is of the opinion that such a step is not warranted in this county because of the fact that plenty of outlet for saving funds is found and because the larger rate of interest is naturally the more popular and will undoubtedly draw savings from Portland to Oregon City and other Clackamas county banks. The Portland banks have ordered a reduction of interest on saving deposits to become effective July 1.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. CLARKS PEOPLE MEET

Union Meetings Are Very Popular. Judge Campbell Speaks

The union meetings at Clarkes, postponed during the religious revival campaign which has been concluded there, have been revived again under the direction of W. H. Wettlaufer. The meetings are held at the grange hall on Sunday evenings and are the source of a great deal of pleasure for the residents of the Clarkes neighborhood.

Current subjects are discussed at each meeting by prominent speakers and at each service large audiences are in attendance.

The union meetings have been held for many months and during that time the residents of the district have heard talks by the most prominent of Clackamas county citizens, with an occasional visitor from other parts of the state. The next meeting will be held at the grange hall on Sunday evening, with Judge J. U. Campbell of Oregon City as the principal speaker. Judge Campbell has selected as his topic "The Requirements of Good Citizenship," and will cite from his long court experience in dealing with the subject.

For Sunday, June 25, Mr. Wettlaufer has invited Dr. Hugh Mount of Oregon City to address the meeting. Dr. Mount will speak on "Hygiene." Clarkes residents are so pleased with the success of the union meetings and are so anxious to have them continued that they have donated sufficient money to purchase a full set of new seats for the grange hall. These will be installed before the time of the next meeting and will add greatly to the comfort of the many who attend the meetings, in addition to increasing the seating capacity somewhat.

GIRL HELD IN JAIL

Helen Sullivan Arrested on River by Sheriff Wilson

"I have been in jail three months and when they released me I thought I could have a good time. Just as my hopes were highest they arrested me again. I would have gone to Seattle instead of coming to Oregon City if I had known the sheriff was after me. I'd like to go to Portland to-night."

This is gleaned from the remarks of Miss Helen Sullivan, arrested on the ferry in the Columbia river between Vancouver, Wash., and the Oregon bank on Saturday by Sheriff W. J. Wilson of Clackamas county. Miss Sullivan had been released from the Clark county, Wash., jail only a short time before her arrest by Sheriff Wilson. The local officer's warrant charged the young woman, who is fair of feature and intelligent, with vagrancy and she was brought to the county jail immediately.

Miss Sullivan is held as a witness in the case of the State of Oregon versus Fritz Boysen, famous proprietor of the Hotel Belle at Milwaukie, which will be heard in Judge Campbell's court here today. Boysen is charged with violation of the prohibition statute and it was largely on the testimony of the Sullivan girl that he was convicted of the charge in justice court here some time ago. The girl testified that she had taken drinks at the Milwaukie joint and her presence today is valuable in the state's case against Boysen.

MR. HEDGES LEAVES

Yale Alumnus is One of Three to Address Reunion

Joseph E. Hedges, Yale college, 1891, will enjoy the happy reunion of Yale classmates to be held at the great New Haven, Conn., school this week and next, and will return to his home here in about four weeks, freshened and perhaps made more happy by renewing the pleasant friendships of college days. He left here late last week for New Haven.

Mr. Hedges was as prominent in collegiate activities in his youth as he has become in the business of law which he has followed since he was graduated from Yale with the class of 1891. For this reason he is well-remembered by his classmates and has been selected by the committee in charge of the class reunion as one of three speakers at a great feast which is to be held at the Hotel Taft, New Haven.

For that occasion Mr. Hedges selected the very appropriate subject "Retrospection," under which he will recall the scenes and incidents of the college life of the men at the banquet.

HEAR WITHOUT EARS

Police and Detectives are Using Lip Reading in Place of Dictagraph

Thousands of deaf people are today throwing away all hearing devices and enjoying all conversation. This method is easily and quickly acquired through our system. Absolutely the only thing of its kind in the country. Our proposition is entirely original. We guarantee results, it will amaze you. Cost is trifling. See what New International Encyclopedia says on Lip Reading. Hundreds of people with normal hearing are taking up Lip Reading for the many benefits gained. You can understand what the actors are saying in the moving pictures. You can understand what people are saying just as far away as you can see them. The eye understands beyond the range of hearing. Send no money, but mention this paper and state whether or not you are deaf. All particulars will be sent you absolutely free and with no expense to you. Address, School of Lip Language, Kansas City, Missouri.

It is estimated that there is enough waste from the sawmills of the South alone to produce twenty thousand tons of paper a day.

The Degeneracy of Modern War

By Captain F. A. MITCHEL

"I don't see how they're going to make stories about this big war in Europe," said the G. A. R. veteran, "when it's all over. What kind of a war is it, anyway? A hundred thousand men march up against a line of trenches defended by rapid fire guns, electric wires and grenades; 60,000 or 70,000 of them are either killed or wounded, while the rest capture a few yards of territory or are driven back without having accomplished anything. You might as well extract romance from the Chicago stockyards on killing day."

The remark was made to a party of men sitting on chairs tilted against the outside of a country store.

"Where's the romance in the war you fit in?" asked an old farmer, taking his pipe out of his mouth and looking at the G. A. R. man doubtfully.

"What is it? Why, that war was brutal of it. It was spread over a big country; there were comparatively few battles; a small amount of taking fortifications and all the rest was romance. I don't mean girl romance, though there was plenty of that. I mean adventure romance. I was concerned in one of 'em myself. We was layin' quiet in camp, down in Tennessee, one summer's evening, singin'."

"When this cruel war is over, or 'Lorena' or some other of the romantic war songs of that time, when my captain came along in a hurry, shoutin', 'Any locomotive engineer among you boys?' I said I'd been a fireman on a locomotive and could run a machine totable well. He yanked me off to the general, who asked me a few questions, and then told me that the bridge guard across the Tennessee river, twenty miles above us, had been attacked and unless he could get reinforcements there right off the bridge would be taken and burned. This would break our line of communications and we might have to give up a big stretch of country we occupied. He wanted an engineer to take a regiment through to the rescue. The officer commanding the guard had telegraphed that he couldn't hold out much longer, when the wire was cut.

"The train was made up and 400 men were hurrying into the cars. A locomotive was being fired up, and I jumped aboard and took the throttle.

"Well, now, maybe there was nothing adventurous in that ride! The colonel commanding the regiment and the adjutant were in the cab with me, and it wasn't long before they were made aware of the fact that we were running a gantlet. It was the people along the road who were trying to wreck us that made it amusing.

Rounding a curve, I saw about half the length of the train ahead of it, wedged in under the rail. It was too late to stop, but I reversed and waited. There was a thump, but the engine stuck to the track. There were seven or ten chances that we would have been ditched and most of us in the cab killed or maimed.

"The next amusing occurrence was the rattle of bullets against the cab. Nobody was hurt, but you'd better believe every man ducked, not excepting the colonel.

"But they didn't get the excitement out of it that I did. I was straining my eyes into the darkness ahead with my hand on the throttle, expecting every minute to run up against an obstruction. The shadow of a tree was a log felled across the track; the shadow of a stump was a tie on the rails. And sometimes the obstructions were real. Once I pulled up within a few feet of a log that had been rolled square across the rails. Another time I slowed up before reaching a switch and found that it had been left open to run us up against a brick house. You see, if they hadn't really been tryin' to wreck us there wouldn't 'a' been any excitement.

"And if there hadn't been any necessity of goin' at a rapid gait there wouldn't 'a' been any fun neither. If we didn't get there in time to save the bridge it meant the retreat of the whole army. So you see I was obliged to let her out, danger or no danger, for if I didn't we wouldn't be in time, and we might as well be wrecked as too late. Besides, if I'd wanted to go slow the colonel, who was at my elbow, wouldn't have allowed it.

"The last obstruction was a post put up on end as a cattle guard only a few miles from the bridge. Seeing that I couldn't stop in time, I put on steam and snapped it off like a twig.

"After passing this we heard firing and knew that the bridge was not yet lost. I blew a long blast on the whistle and heard a distant cheer. When we came near the bridge the colonel ordered me to stop the train in a cut. The men got out and, forming on one side of the cut on high ground, charged down on the attacking force and drove them off.

"Now, that's what I call the romance of war—the adventurous romance. When I got back to camp the general sent for me, and I thought he was going to bug me. I never saw a man look so tickled in my life. I'd saved hundreds of square miles of territory."

"What chance has any soldier to do anything like that in this big European slaughter business? I don't blame fellows for not volunteering in such a war. It's like volunteering for certain death without any of the excitement that was so fascinating in the racket we had from '61 to '65."

"How about them fellers fightin' in the sky?" asked a listener.

The G. A. R. man gave no reply.

GERMANS MEET

Draw Resolutions in Support of Adequate Preparedness

With the adoption of vigorous resolutions regarding the present world crisis, the annual convention of the Consolidated German Speaking Societies of Oregon closed at noon Sunday after a two days' session. The convention was held at Portland.

When the resolutions were submitted a tremendous demonstration followed. The convention went on record as condemning all attempts to divide Americans over the European conflict; declared, with qualifications, for adequate preparedness; favored an American merchant marine; declared for free tolls through the Panama Canal for American ships, and asserted that all American rights should be maintained at all times against all transgressors.

The convention reaffirmed the same resolutions adopted last year against the exportation of munitions to all belligerents and against the exportation of munitions to all belligerents and against the loaning of money to foreign nations engaged in war.

Among the resolutions were the following:

"We believe in adequate preparedness based upon patriotism and culminating in efficiency, but divorced from politics and jingoism. We disapprove an overgrown military establishment that may be used for purposes of conquest or the intimidation of labor.

"We believe that an American merchant marine should be created and protected, so that American ships under the Stars and Stripes shall carry on our foreign commerce; and to this end we also believe that the Panama Canal, built and maintained by American men and means, should be absolutely free to all American ships, and we hold that all who deny or defeat such a policy are un mindful of American interests and should be retired from public life.

"We believe in the freedom of the seas and the policy of the open door; good will as opposed to the double standard in foreign relations, which judges with harsh acerbity the mistakes of one nation and condones with academic approval the offenses of another. We believe in maintaining all American rights at all times against transgressors, without undue severity and haste on the one hand, or undue leniency and delay on the other. The wise counsels of Washington and the humanitarian statesmanship of Jefferson should be sufficient guide for Americans in the difficult and devious paths of foreign policy."

CITIZENS TO TRAIN

Civilian Camp Established at American Lake. Guard Also Camps

There will open at American Lake, Washington, by the authority of the Secretary of War and under supervision of the United States army, a military training camp for civilians of Oregon and Washington. The camp will last four weeks. The federal government pays the cost of transporting men to and from camp, furnishes uniforms and all equipment and provides rations.

The camp will be known as the United States Army Military Training Camp for civilians. All men between the ages of 18 and 50, who are citizens of the United States, physically fit and who have at least a high school education, or its equivalent in business or professional experience, are eligible to enroll.

The object of the camp, which is one of several to be held this year in various parts of the United States, is to give to educated and patriotic men a basic training in military science so that, if the nation ever is invaded, they may, if they care to help defend their country, be fitted to accept commissions as line officers in volunteer forces.

Many Oregonians have evidenced their approval of the army training camp system and have made plans to join the patriotically-inspired many who will make up the northern school for citizen soldiers. Because of the distance, however, the majority of those who would take a summer outing in such a serviceable way as in the service of the nation are allying themselves with the organized militia, where, in place of paying for the privilege of serving are well paid for their time. The national guard of Oregon will encamp as usual this year and with the new pay bill to go into effect soon it is expected that the attendance will exceed all records.

Floss Is Honored

Fritz C. Floss, of Milwaukie, graduated last week from the Oregon Agricultural college, was honored for his consistent and conscientious work as a student of mining engineering at the state college. Mr. Floss was one of twenty-six young men and women who were designated as honor students by the O. A. C. faculty. He has been a student at the Corvallis institution for several years, and last week brought his studies to an auspicious termination when he received a diploma from the school of mining engineering, and with it classification as an honor student, for which the requirements are very stringent.

The Editor's Record

The editor died and went to heaven, But stood outside the gate Because he hadn't the nerve to knock And thought that he would wait Till some other mortals came along; He'd then see what they'd do, And if they entered the pearly gate He thought he might slip through. He watched the vast procession pass Up to the portals wide, While Peter told some they were up too high, And others he took inside.

The editor, weary of waiting so long, Finally got in line To see if Peter would accept him then Or would "with thanks" decline. He heard the sweet voiced angels sing. His eyes filled to the brim. He shivered and shook in agony, "Knowing his chances slim."

"Aha!" said Peter. "An editor here?" (He laughed with pure delight) "Why, certainly you may come right in, For all you did was write."

Bank Vault Accepted The city has accepted the gift of a large steel bank vault replaced by the First National bank, and has stored it in the rear of the city hall, where it will remain until a suitable place for its erection can be decided upon by the council. The vault is a very heavy structure and required many hands to move from the bank building. Trucks were borrowed from the Hawley mills to transport the vault.

The value of livestock dying from disease on the national forest ranges in 1915 was less than $200,000. A majority of the cattlemen are now vaccinating their stock for blackleg, one of the chief loss-causing cattle diseases of the west, and thus preventing the serious losses of the past.
