DAIRY and CREAMERY

INBREEDING CATTLE.

When Practiced Judiciously It Results In Herd Improvement.

I am aware that it is not always possible for the owner of a small herd to retain and use the old bull even if it is known that his offspring are high producers, writes Professor C. H. Eccles, University of Missouri, in Board's Dairyman. I do not in general favor inbreeding to any great extent. However, if I had a bull known to be a sire of high merit I would not hesitate to breed him to his own daughters rather than to get another the merit of which I did not know. It is well known that inbreeding intensifies the characteristics of the animals mated. If they are deficient in any respect this is likely to appear even stronger than in the parents. If the animals are strong and vigorous and have the dairy characteristics wanted the offspring are all the Guernsey cows are noted for their production of large quantities of rich milk and the excellence of the butter produced. Guernsey butter is distinguished by its rich yellow color. The Guernsey cow here shown is an imported animal. She was born in 1911, and in a recent test gave 626.6 pounds of milk containing 23.14 pounds of fat in 31 days. She is owned by J. J. Hope, Florham Farms, Madison, N. J.

more certain to have the same if the parents are related.

Where the herd is large enough to make it practical the thing to do in many cases is to keep two bulls, or at least retain the bull after he is used until it is possible to see how his daughters milk. Of course it costs money to feed an extra bull, but the daughters may be enough better to pay the extra expense many times over.

It is to be hoped that community breeding will develop more and more in the future. Then it will be entirely practical for an aged bull to be kept in the neighborhood for several years when he has proved to be a good breeder and opportunity thus afforded for his blood to be widely used.

I should say that the question of using a son of a present herd bull would not be at all objectionable provided his dam comes from a good strain of breeding and is herself a good individual and a heavy milker. In case the daughters of the old bull are also satisfactory, showing he is a prepotent sire, this would be a good plan to follow.

Inbreeding is generally applied to the mating of animals within the first degree of relationship, such as parent and offspring, or brother and sister. Line breeding is mating animals having the same ancestors, but not so closely related—for example, the same grandparents.

BITTER FLAVOR IN MILK.

Weeds In Early Pastures Frequent Cause of This Trouble.

At this time of the year bad flavors can usually be charged to the various weeds the cows eat when first turned to pasture. They are always greedy for green feed, and when turned out too early there will be more weeds, many times, than grass. The wild onion or garlic freely imparts its disagreeable flavor to milk. There is no remedy except to keep the cows off pasture until there is enough grass so they will not be tempted to eat the weeds. Aerate the milk by running it over a cooler as soon as it is milked will help some. Milk is always improved by giving it this treatment.

There are bitter flavors due to certain bacteria that gain access to the milk in the process of handling. If the bitterness does not develop until the milk has stood some time it is an indication that this cause is responsible for the bad flavor. Since it is through something getting into the milk, therefore, the remedy is to use greater care about the barn and milk room to prevent dirt of any kind getting into the milk.

Sometimes individual cows give bitter milk. When this occurs it is usually because they are out of condition or just going dry. It is usually best to dry such cows at once. Such milk should be kept separate from the rest or all of the milk will take on the bitter flavor.

Twins Calves.

When twins are born and both are of the same sex they will breed with just as much certainty as though they were not twins. When a male and female calf are twins it is the rule that one or the other will not breed and most generally it is the female. So seldom does she breed and so generally does the male breed that it may be considered the rule that the male breeds and the female fails to breed—Kinball's Dairy Farmer.

MOOSE CELEBRATE

Local Lodgemen Join With Portlanders for July 4 at Park

Joining hands and efforts to bring about the greatest measure of success and pleasure, the Clackamas county members of the Moose lodge and the Portland brothers will take advantage of the holiday on July 4 to enjoy a great picnic party and patriotic program at Gladstone park. Last year the Moose celebration at Gladstone was attended by ten thousand lodgemen and their ladies, and estimates on attendance this year account for a great many more people.

The Oregon City and the Portland Moose bands will be on hand and baseball between Clackamas and Multnomah county teams will be a feature of the sports program.

In addition to taking part in the July 4 event at Gladstone the local Moose lodge will send nearly 100 members to Salem on June 24 to join other lodges of the state in the big time that is planned there.

The committee appointed by the Oregon City lodge to arrange for the participation of Clackamas county Moose at Gladstone includes the following members: Otto Schindler, H. A. Shandy, Ed. Brady, William M. Stone, A. A. Price, John F. Albright, L. F. McGahuey and D. F. Skene.

How to Get Rid of a Cold

Summer colds are serious. Read how C. E. Summers, Holdrege, Neb., got rid of his: "I contracted a severe cold and cold and could hardly sleep. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and the very first dose relieved me. I took a second dose before going to bed and can truthfully say I did not cough all night. By using as directed the next two days my cough was entirely cured and I give Foley's Honey and Tar full credit for my speedy recovery." Foley's always soothes and heals. BUILDING TO START

Milwaukie Board Has Complete Plans for School

Architects have completed the revised plans for the Milwaukie schoolhouse, which will be built on the two-acre site purchased two years ago. The directors have approved of the plans as submitted to them, and it is expected that the contract will be let within the next two weeks and work started.

It will be a one-story structure with full basement and will contain eight rooms. For the present there will be a play-court and lunchroom. The unit will be for the grammar grades. Hollow tile will be used in the walls and there will be brick trimmings. It will be plain, but attractive in appearance. It is hoped to get the structure under way in time to have it completed by the opening of the fall term.

The cost will probably be within the $20,000 limit, which is the amount of the bonds the district has sold. It is estimated that eight rooms will take care of the grammar grades for several years, there being about 250 pupils of these grades to be absorbed from the old building, leaving something more than 120 high school students in the old building. The high school and grammar departments will be completely separated.

Shower Baths on Trains

Shower baths for freight cars may seem a rather startling idea, yet the Southern Pacific company is actually installing them at San Francisco and Los Angeles. General Superintendent of Motive Power T. W. Heintzelman has hit on this way of testing cars for leaky roofs. He has had great showers built over the freight tracks in the yards and runs the cars under the sprays to see whether they need any repairs for the rainy season. It is hoped by this precaution to better protect shipments of merchandise over the southern Pacific from wet weather—another safety first precaution. Superintendent Burkhalter of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon expresses a hope that similar features may find their way into service in this state.

Club Transformed

The Friar's club, notorious in this county for many years, has been shorn of its former glory and transformed into a play ground for children and a site for picnic outings and dancing parties. The club was the center of many raids and attacks by peace officers in its palmy days, but gives evidence now of becoming a very pleasant recreation center. A dancing pavilion, bathing tank, swings, merry-go-rounds and burros and goats for little ones are features that have taken the place of the form of revelry once in style at the famous Milwaukie tavern.
