

"PIONEER NIGHT" AT CITY COUNCIL

wise, and I'm proud of it. But when it comes to assessing me for a third sewer, after I've connected with two at my own expense and then paid for them, I'm here to protest and say that I don't believe its square."

Councilman Roake said he didn't think it was right, either, and moved that the matter of the sewer assessments be heard at a special meeting next Tuesday night, and that in the meantime the Recorder look up the records and find out who wanted that sewer in the first place.

Reports of the fire chief, police chief, recorder, and finance committee were then read; and also the opinion of L. V. Stipp on the refunding bond issue. Mr. Stipp pronounced the bonds O. K. In the course of auditing the monthly bills, one was presented from the Gamewell Fire Alarm company for inspecting the local system. The bill was for $5.00, and the council seemed inclined to hold it. Councilman Metzner said that the inspector had told him that Oregon City had the best system in Oregon, Washington or Montana—and thus cheered with praise, the council passed the bill.

Councilman VanAuker suggested it was time to think about cilling the streets. City Engineer Miller suggested using liquid asphalt, instead of oil, so as to give the pavement a "binder" and to better preserve the streets. The street committee was asked to investigate the work plans and report which it thought most economical.

Mr. VanAuker also wanted to know if motor trucks had any right to tear up wooden crosswalks, or dump dirt in the river. Mr. Schuebel said that tearing up crosswalks was probably legitimate wear-and-tear, and as for dumping dirt in the river, that was a matter for Uncle Sam to look after.

"But if we let them dump dirt in the river, Uncle Sam will have to dredge it out again," said Mr. VanAuker. Nobody seemed to care.

Mr. VanAuker also wanted three fire hydrants at Mountain View, and the Recorder was instructed to tell the water board to put them in: one at Molalla avenue and Duane street, and the other two somewhere on Duane street or thereabouts.

Mayor Hackett then remarked that it was time to consider jitneys and jitney permits. He said there hadn't been any applications for franchises as yet. Mr. Templeton delivered a short oration against jitneys that ran to Portland and wanted to know why the mayor and the council ignored the jitney ordinance. Metzner thought the jitney on the hill ought to be let run, but the chief of police ought to arrest all other jits.

Councilman "Jit" VanAuker suggested that the city ought to give the hill jitney $20 or $30 a year as a subsidy, instead of asking a franchise fee from it, adding that the city put up $100 a month for the elevator.

This brought out the second councilmanic "pioneer" of the evening, former Councilman Sam Francis, who said he lived on the hill, and that the hill people wanted some kind of transportation.

"When I was in the council," he said, "we had the same trouble you have now. When questions that concerned the people were up for discussion, nobody would ever turn out and express an opinion. Now I'm here tonight to tell you what the people on the hill think of the jitney matter. We've walked for 25 years, and we are tired of walking and want some sort of transportation. We'd like a street car line, if we could get one. But every time a street car line is suggested there is trouble over getting a franchise; and now that we have had jitney service, there seems to be trouble over a franchise, too."

Mr. Francis went into the matter in much detail, and registered one strong kick against the VanAuker and Chandler jitneys—to wit, that they did not keep any regular schedule, but went off on "for hire" trips when they were most needed. He said the people on the hill wanted the city to license the hill jitney, and to give it a franchise that would compel it to run on a regular and convenient schedule. He took the council severely to task for showing favoritism to the VanAuker-Chandler jitney and giving it a permit, and for talking of giving it an exclusive franchise, when there was a man in the field who was willing to put on a 25-passenger bus and make half-hourly trips.

Councilman Metzner said that was his idea, too; he wanted to see the hill jitney forced to make regular schedule trips. Councilman Templeton then hauled out the "resolution" that emanated—as Mayor Hackett said—as a previous meeting—from "Charlie" Latourette, and got in his speech about the beauty of Portland's jitney regulation and the "immoral" jits of the Portland-Oregon City jits. Mr. Templeton and Mr. Francis differed about the matter of competition with the interurban line. The third councilmanic "pioneer" of the evening, former Councilman Fred Meyer, also entered the fray, and scored the Portland jits while he praised the hill jitney.

Finally Councilman Schuebel got the floor and urged the council to use common sense in regard to regulating the jitneys or else repeal the jitney ordinance altogether.

"There seems to be a lack of comprehension of your jitney law," said Mr. Schuebel. "Under its provisions jitneys of all kinds are absolutely prohibited from operating in the city unless they have a franchise. Permits granted them by the mayor have no legal value. Now if the council will look at the matter in a common-sense way, and draw up a model jitney franchise—which simply means regulate them—both the city and the jitneys can be protected. This franchise should provide a definite route for each jitney, a definite schedule, and a definite fee. There is no need of scaring people by talking about a franchise and a great big bond; a simple regulation will accomplish all you want. You don't have to give every man who applies a franchise; but when you do give a man a franchise you can revoke it the minute he doesn't live up to its regulations. Now if you don't want to do this, why let's be business-like and repeal the ordinance; and if you do want to do it, let's stop giving permits and get down to something definite."

Councilman Metzner moved that the mayor appoint a committee of three to draw up a model franchise, that the chief be ordered to arrest all jitneys but the hill jitney, and that the hill jitney be given a permit till next Tuesday. Templeton seconded the motion, it carried, and Mr. Hackett appointed Metzner, VanAuker, and Buckles as the committee to wrestle with the jitney problem anew.

The Drs. Mount offered to stand the expense of "markers" on Main street at the intersections of Tenth and Seventh, so that automobiles would be forced to turn square corners, and so simplify traffic problems. The matter was referred to the street committee, and council adjourned.

STOCK MOVEMENT HEAVY

Beaver Creek Sends Good Supplies to Portland Yards This Year

Ferris Mayfield, of Beaver Creek, has favored the Courier with the following account of stock shipments from his station on the Willamette Valley Southern:

The shipping of stock at Beaver Creek has increased to such an extent that I now figure on a car load every week.

Since starting up in December, I have shipped close to 700 head of hogs and several head of cattle. In general the farmers get their hogs in fine condition. Four hogs, 7 months old and averaging 264 pounds each, bought of Mrs. C. Kleinsmith and Miss E. Kleinsmith, of Clarks, this week, topped the market out of the 700 head. They were the O. I. C. breed.

Ten hogs, also O. I. C. breed, 6 months old and averaging 220 pounds, each, received in March from Ed. Buol, of Clarks, were a close second. J. Egger, of Redland, also delivered 10 head, 6 months old, and averaging 210 pounds each.

I expect to make shipments of sheep and lambs soon.

Could Hardly Do Her Work

Housework is trying on health and strength. Women are as much inclined to kidney and bladder trouble as men. Symptoms of aching back, stiff and sore joints and muscles, blurred vision, puffiness under eyes, should be given prompt attention before they lead to chronic or more serious ailment. Mrs. George Hauck, 955 Pearl St., Benton Harbor, Mich., writes: "I was awful bad, with such pain I could hardly do my work, and I am very thankful for Foley Kidney Pills."—Jones Drug Co.

BOOK ON PARKS OUT

National Playgrounds Described in Readable Government Report

The Department of the Interior has issued a descriptive pamphlet entitled "Glimpses of Our National Parks," which is already familiar to school children and teachers, and is now being offered for general circulation. The book describes the chief features of nine national parks, the Hot Springs Reservation and the Grand Canyon—the latter being a national monument under the direction of the Department of Agriculture.

The pamphlet is well worth reading by any American citizen who desires to become familiar with the natural wonders and beauty spots of the country, and contains one chapter devoted to Crater Lake park, in Oregon. The wonders of Mount Rainier national park, in Washington, one of scenic spots of the world, are also vividly and appealingly described. The pamphlet may be obtained free from the department, if a request is sent to the office of Secretary Franklin K. Lane.

HARD SURFACE OFFER

Worswick Paving Offered County for Roads at Practical Cost

The county court has received a letter from a former member of the Standard Paving company, controllers of the Worswick paving laid on Main street, Oregon City, offering to permit to use this form of surfacing on its roads at cost.

In making the offer Harry Worswick asks for a salary of $1800 a year, as general superintendent of the work, and desires the county to erect a plant for making the pavement. The cost of this plant is estimated at $5,000. Aside from this Mr. Worswick asks that he be given the privilege of engaging the three men who will be intimately concerned with mixing the pavement.

The county is to furnish material for the paving, and is to lay the finished product on such roads as it selects. The plan has been taken under advisement by the court.

METHODIST REVIVAL ENDS

Thirteen Weeks Battle for Converts Brings Over 35 Into Church

Revival services which have been conducted in the First Methodist church at Oregon City for the past 13 weeks ended the first of the week. Over 35 new members have been secured for the church, and 75 of those who attended the meetings have professed conversion. Of the conversions about a dozen were children. A large number of workers was organized at the close of the revival to continue church development work.

Services were started by the Rev. J. K. Hawkins, pastor of the church, and after some weeks the Rev. L. F. Smith, of Portland, was called to take charge of the revival. Services were held nightly in the church, at times lasting until early in the morning.

WOMAN IS ACQUITTED

Justice Court Jury Decides Ada McMaugh Didn't Assault Father

The second trial of the assault case growing out of the complaint filed by John McMaugh of Oswego, against his daughter, Ada McMaugh, ended in an acquittal of the woman by a jury in Justice Seiver's court Monday. The first trial, held at Oswego before Justice Haines, resulted in a hung jury. McMaugh charged prejudice, and obtained a change of venue to Justice Seiver's court.

The trial lasted the better part of the day. The jury was composed of A. B. Dillman, Mike Long, B. J. Staats, D. F. Skeen, Leslie Wells and William Green. Troubles of the McMaugh family were freely aired at the trial, and a large number of witnesses were summoned.

DRIED LOGANBERRIES NEXT

Government May Buy Oregon Fruit for Army and Navy Posts

The purchase of evaporated loganberries for the Commissary Department of the U. S. Army, Navy, and other government posts, is announced by the Salem Capital Journal as a probability now being considered. Manager Paulus has been working on this idea for some time with the Oregon senators and congressmen and has recently received the promise that the fruit will be given a test to find out its adaptability to government uses.

Resolutions passed by the fruit growers at their annual session have been forwarded to Washington and are under advisement by congressmen who have presented the situation to the federal commissary officers.

Surprise for Miss Bullard

Saturday night a surprise party was given in honor of Miss Hazel Bullard at her home in the Clarks district, when many of her friends came in and surprised her. An enjoyable evening was spent, games and jokes being the features of the entertainment. Later dainty refreshments were served.

Those present to help surprise her were: Mr. and Mrs. Franel, Mr. and Mrs. T. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Makinsler, Mrs. Johnston, and son, of Portland; Robert Moehke, Henry and Charlie Mueller, Misses Bernice Gard, Esther Franel, Esther Ginter, Gladys Makinsler, Grace Franel, Gladys Bullard, of Oregon City; Elma Bullard, Bertha and Agnes Wallace; Messrs. Alva Gard, Arthur Henton, Charlie Moehke, Clyde Fisher, John Moehke, Guy Dix, Archie Makinsler, Mr. and Mrs. Bullard. After a late hour in the morning all departed, wishing Miss Bullard many happy returns of the day.

How are you fixed for letter heads and envelopes?—Courier.

Ex-Mayor to Speak

Linn E. Jones, former mayor of Oregon City, will be the chief speaker at the union meeting at Clarks this Sunday, the subject of his address being: "Hygienic Laws and Their Relation to the Development of Manhood and Womanhood." The Clarks orchestra and a choir will furnish music. The meeting will be held at half past seven in the evening.

Mills Shut Down

Water power machinery in the mills on the west side of the river was closed down Tuesday to enable the government to finish construction of cofferdams in the canal running to the locks. Enlargement of the locks and the channel through them is being rushed under federal supervision.

Postal Business Grows

Oregon City's post office is busier this year than it was last year, according to figures just compiled for the first quarter of 1916. During that time the post office took in $5,998.95, as against $4,717.98 taken in during the same quarter of 1915.

REGISTRATION STILL SLOW

Less than Half of Total Voters Enrolled by First of Week

Figures compiled by the county clerk's office shows that up to this week 6,886 voters out of a possible 14,000 had registered in Clackamas county. Registrations have been made at the court house at the rate of about 50 a day. This figure will probably be considerably increased during the remainder of the time for registering, as the books close April 18.

District registrars are speeding up as the registration period draws to a close. They are visiting houses in their communities and getting voters to enroll, and are thus piling up a considerable vote that will not show immediately at the county clerk's office. One registrar secured 50 names last Monday, for instance; but these will not be reported to the county clerk's office until the end of the week.

Registration stops April 18 for the average voter. The only people who can register after that date are those who become of age just before election or those who become of age just before election or those who become naturalized after April 18. REGISTER NOW!

CURFEW HOUR CHANGES

Nine O'Clock, Summer Deadline, Now Sounded on County Seat Alarm

Boys and girls who didn't hear the curfew bell at eight o'clock last Saturday, and who thought that Patrolman Woodward had forgotten to ring it, and that as a consequence they wouldn't have to go home at all, were sadly disappointed at nine o'clock when the familiar three strokes on the big bell on top of the hill boomed out. The reason for the change was the wise and lenient provision of the law, which lets youngsters stay up and out longer in summer than in winter.

Spring having been well started on its way, and the early dark of evenings having given away to a pleasant twilight, the "summer curfew" hour is now in force, and until late in September nine o'clock will be the deadline for minors on the streets of the county seat, instead of eight.

FEW FISH FOR ANGLERS

Lots of Enthusiasm, but Too Much Mud in Waters for Real Sport

Trollers for salmon made their appearance at the falls last Saturday and Sunday, and caught a few fish. The record for the first day of trolling was one chinook and six steelheads. Sunday the catch was a little better, probably because more anglers were out. But the river was too turbulent and muddy for much sport, and after trying their luck for a couple hours in the early morning, most of the fishermen quit.

Good sport was reported by anglers who went out after trout Saturday and Sunday, some heavy catches being made in the upper Clackamas region and back of Molalla. With the advent of good weather, river and stream conditions are expected to improve, and more anglers will go out. Clackamas county appears to be continuing as the sportsmen's paradise of Oregon.

EDITOR ON PLATFORM

G. J. Taylor, of Molalla, Tells Canby Folk About "Dad"

Wednesday night, at the Canby Methodist church, G. J. Taylor, editor of the Molalla Pioneer, gave his interesting and philosophical talk on "Dad." Aside from being a newspaperman Mr. Taylor is a humorist and a thinker, and his remarks about the head of the family were well worth listening to. And there was a kindly morale to his talk, as well, that stayed with his auditors after they left the meeting.

Music was furnished by the Pioneer male quartette. A large gathering was present, and the proceeds were given to the Canby high school.

Editor Taylor is fast building a reputation as one of the best and most entertaining speakers in the county, and probably will soon be in demand on the Clatsop circuit.

FISH WASTE UTILIZED

Eastern Plant Will Seek Profits in Material Discarded in Trade

About April 15 the Sanitary Rendering Co., of Lubec, Me., on the American border, will complete its factory, now in course of erection, for extracting oil from herring waste and making dried fish scrap from the residue. The company plans to turn out about 750 barrels of oil and 300 tons of fish scrap this year.

The fish will for the most part be caught near Grand Manan Island, New Brunswick, and will be imported into Lubec after being cured by Canadians. The sale of smoked herring has been one of the chief export activities of the St. Stephen district for many years, and it is hoped that the utilization of the waste will still further increase the value of the trade.

GLADSTONE STILL QUIET

Insurgents in Council Block Action on Water by Staying Away

Gladstone's water fight is still in "statu quo," as lawyers say, no developments having developed at Tuesday night's meeting for the simple reason that there wasn't any real meeting. Three of the councilmen, the mayor and recorder showed up, ready for action—and the other three councilmen stayed away. Gladstone's charter provides that it takes four councilmen to make a quorum.

Those on hand for the water fight were Councilmen Niles, Sievers and Burdon; those who stayed away were Goodman, Clyde and Parrish.

SPANKED HIS WIFE

George B. Prettyman, of the Gresham Country, Is Sued for Divorce

George B. Prettyman, who used to live at Rockwood, and who later moved to Gresham, has a few friends in different parts of Clackamas county who will be surprised to learn that Mrs. Prettyman has filed suit against him for divorce, making sensational charges in her complaint. Among other things she declares that her husband spanked her "in the manner one would spank a child, injuring and embarrassing her, and further desiring to annoy and humiliate her on the same occasion, he removed her shoes and persisted in tickling her feet, well knowing that she was exceedingly ticklish and that such acts caused her to be hysterical."

On another occasion, she alleges, he struck her with a large picture, breaking the glass, and cutting her head; also he placed a revolver against her heart at another time, telling her that if "she had anything to say she had better say it quick."

TWO HURT IN AUTO

Machine Capsizes on Abernathy Road. Injuring County Seat Men

Theodore Osmund, of the office force of the Hawley mill, and T. P. Randall were painfully injured Sunday on the Abernathy road, when an auto in which they were riding capsized near Linn's mill. H. F. Tschirgi was driving the car, and E. Schwab was also a member of the party, the members of which had been fishing in Mill creek. Falling in luck there, the four men started out to cross the ridge to Abernathy creek.

On the road they struck a large rock, and the resulting jar threw Mr. Tschirgi's hands off the steering wheel. A second later the car lurched to one side of the road and pitched over the bank, throwing the occupants out. Mr. Osmund sprained a shoulder, and Mr. Randall sustained injuries to the hip. The spill wrecked the gasoline tank on the car. Mr.

"The Ne'er Do Well," by Rex Beach, which comes to the Grand Theatre in picture form Friday and Saturday of this week, is one of the most typical American plays ever produced.

Following closely the story of the novel by the same name, the photo-drama reproduces on the screen the scenery of the Panama Canal country, and all the wealth of costume and incident that is common to the tropics. The play is a masterful rendering of the career of a pucky Yankee, outcast from his home, and given a chance to "make good" in the land of the Big Ditch. How his American spirit triumphs over adversity, plot and intrigue is shown as the plot unfolds.

Tschirgi and Mr. Schwab were unable to get the car back on the road again, so they telephoned to Oregon City for help.
