WHY NOT TRY THIS

Livestock Shipping Plan Adopted in Yamhill County Sees Success

A number of Oregon farmers are going to try the plan of doing their own livestock shipping. A cooperative livestock association has been organized by a representative group of farmers in the vicinity of Dayton, Yamhill county. The organization has the usual officers with the customary duties prescribed, and its activities are directed by a Board of Directors. The methods of operation are explained by R. E. Reynolds, Agricultural College livestock extension specialist, as follows:

The business of shipping and selling is conducted through a manager who serves for a commission. When any member of the association has a bunch of livestock about ready for shipment he notifies the manager by phone or otherwise. He tells the manager of the kind, number and general quality of his shipment, and the approximate time at which it will be ready for shipping. This information is recorded by the manager and when enough stock has been listed for shipment he notifies each grower when to bring his stock in.

When the stock arrives at the shipping point it is marked for identification, and proper records are made. The stock is then taken to Portland or other markets by the manager, where each lot is sold on its own individual merits and the proceeds credited to the owner. After deducting the expense of shipment and sales by adjusting the charges pro rata among the members, the net proceeds belonging to each owner are turned over to him by the sales manager. In this way the growers are able to save the buyers' profits for themselves. They also secure the advantages derived from sales in large lots, and at the same time receive the price brought by their individual lot.

CANAL SURE OF TRADE

Pres. Sproule, of S. P., Thinks Big Ditch Will Soon Refrain Business

President William Sproule, of the Southern Pacific, commenting on the resumption of traffic through the Panama Canal after the present slide is repaired, says that the setback caused by the slide is only temporary and that the temporary setback will not prevent the return of shipments to the waterway.

"The public uses," said Sproule, "the various facilities for transportation at its disposal. The closing of the canal was a mere incident. The railroads have never believed, and certainly the Southern Pacific does not now believe that the Panama Canal is or will be put out of business by the railroads."

"The closing of the canal by slides is but a temporary setback of the kind which may be expected for a long time to come, just as a railroad through mountain canyons is subject to landslides for a considerable period after construction."

"Then there is added to the embarrassment caused by the closing of the canal the fact that ships can now derive extraordinary profits from the international traffic. There may be an interval when the canal will not be in such active use for coast-to-coast business as it would have under normal conditions. This, however, is no basis for judgment of the future."

"Looking into the future broadly, the various kinds of traffic will take the routes of carriage that suit the commodity best, every condition considered."

HOW FAR IS PORTLAND?

Not So Far That the Statements of Its Residents Cannot Be Verified

Rather an interesting case has been developed in Portland. Being so near by, it is well worth publishing here. The statement is sincere—the proof convincing:

George Hearn, grocer, 160 Beech St. Portland, Ore., says: "As the result of an attack of typhoid fever, my kidneys were left in a weakened condition. My back ached and there was a tired feeling and weakness across my loins. If I was on my feet much or walked very far, it started the pain and aching. The action of my kidneys was too frequent and the kidney secretions passed with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills promptly removed the aches and pains and corrected the trouble with my kidneys."

NO COMPLAINT AT ALL

Man Arrested in Oregon City Honest, Says Portland Woman

Charles Gannon is a wonderful prophet, and some police are too suspicious. Charles was arrested in Oregon City last Sunday by Chief of Police Blanchard, and at that time he told the chief that no complaint would be made against him if he was held for trial. And Charles prophesied correctly, for Monday he was turned out in police court in Portland. Gannon had in his possession when he was arrested two supposedly diamond earrings, and two supposedly diamond rings. The stones in the earrings were not diamonds, and the stone in one of the rings was not a diamond. The second ring had a small diamond in it, however. And because he had these things, Chief Blanchard thought that maybe Gannon was a crook. Saturday he showed the earrings to a local jeweler, who saw that they weren't genuine; and maybe that had something to do with it.

At any rate, Sunday Gannon went to the owner of a certain safety-deposit box in the county seat and said he wanted to place the jewelry therein. Chief of Police Blanchard saw the glittering stones in the man's hand, and investigated. He asked Gannon what his idea was, and the stranger replied that a Mrs. Clara Ingalls, of Woodstock, had given him the earrings to get the stones removed and set in rings. The chief had heard that the stones in the earrings weren't real diamonds, and he further discovered from Gannon that Mrs. Ingalls was 81 years of age. What more likely, thought the chief, than that Gannon had removed the good stones and had paste imitations put in their place? He had heard of such things being done.

Further conversation with Gannon elicited the information that he was 42 years of age. He didn't look more than 35 to the chief. There was also something said about Gannon's possible marriage to the 81 year old woman. At any rate, Chief Blanchard locked his man up, and notified Portland police. Detective Goltz came up to the county seat and got Gannon—and in Portland he was turned out, because Mrs. Ingalls said she knew he had the jewelry, that she had all sorts of confidence in him, and that she wouldn't make any complaint.

Asked if she was thinking of marrying Gannon, Mrs. Ingalls laughed. "I am 81 years of age," she said, "and I guess I'm too old for foolishness like that."

And besides, Gannon was married once—and got a divorce.

Heavy Damages Asked

Mrs. Margaret Martin, who was struck by an automobile February 19, at the east end of the suspension bridge, has filed suit for $5000 damages against E. F. and W. B. Portouow. Brownell & Sievers are her attorneys. Mrs. Martin alleges that she has been permanently injured through the carelessness of E. F. Portouow, who was driving the car that struck her.

IOWA SEED GOOD

Oats from Buckeye State Shows High Percentage of Germination

Oregon farmers who don't like to import oats from Iowa, for figures just compiled by the Department of Agriculture, after exhaustive tests, show that Iowa seed oats have a high record for germination. Tests were made of seed oats from Indiana, Iowa and Kansas, and the following results were noted:

The average germination was lowest for Indiana and highest for Iowa. Of the 2,900 samples tested from the three states 268 or over 9 per cent germinated less than 75 per cent, 122 samples or over four per cent germinated less than 75 per cent, 122 samples or over four per cent germinated less than 50 per cent, and 84 samples or nearly 25 per cent germinated less than 25 per cent. This shows that much of the seed oats intended to be used this spring germinate poorly and that germination tests should be made in all cases before sowing.

At the same time that the above tests were made 576 samples taken from car lots of commercial oats were tested, the average germination being 78 per cent. This shows that where commercial oats must be depended on for a seed supply it is even more important to test the seed for germination than when local supplies are relied on.

Seed showing a low germination should either not be sowed or enough extra seed should be used to insure getting a good stand.

ROBBERS' CAVE FOUND

Aurora People Get Thrills as Den of Thieves Is Uncovered

A dug-out was discovered Saturday on the Fry farm across the river, and Sunday a crowd gathered to watch the proceedings as the covered in portions were shoveled out, some anticipating that a human body might be found beneath. However, only a few stolen tools, rotten bedclothing, an alarm clock, some cooking utensils, etc., were found.

The dug-out had evidently been made a couple of years. Saws, a diaphane, blacksmith's hammer, etc. found there were stolen from R. F. Betts, the Barlow blacksmith, some 16 months ago. About the same time the King saloon at Barlow was burglarized and a quantity of liquor and tobacco stolen, an empty tobacco "caddy" with King's name on it was found in the dug-out, as were several bottles of whiskey—Pebbleford brand.

Beside the dug-out was a brush "lean-to" where cooking was done. Both dug-out and lean-to were in the dense brush, and would easily escape notice. They were discovered by the North family who were in search of a lost calf.

The finding of a Southern Pacific lantern with a red globe led some to believe that the place was the rendezvous for a gang that intended to hold up a train. As the dug-out was nearly 25 feet long, 4 feet wide, and more than six feet deep, well timbered, and covered 3 feet deep with earth, it required a great deal of labor, and probably was done by two or three men, though it was suggested that all the work may have been done by some one mentally unbalanced.

What motives prompted the making of the dug-out is uncertain, but its use as a depository of stolen goods shows the criminal character of those who used it as a "hang-out"—a sort of a "Robbers' Roost."

Geo. Fry who nicely cleaned up all the recovered tools, has turned them over to their owners. What became of the "refreshments" "deponent saith not," unless they went to fortify the diggers against the fatigue of the labor of recovery.—(Aurora Observer.)

FISHING BILL BACKED

Columbia River Union People Take Up Measure Started by Local Group

The proposed initiative measure for the protection of salmon and the barring of fishwheels, seines, and traps in the Columbia river and its tributaries, launched by the Clackamas County Fishermen's union, has been endorsed and taken up by the Columbia River Fishermen's Protective union, of Astoria. This action was taken last week, following a visit of President J. F. Albright, of the local union, to Astoria.

Mr. Albright is much cheered by the lower river fishermen, as it gives him confidence in the ultimate success of the measure. Mr. Albright had been told that the measure would be harmful to the canneries and packing interests; but as the Astoria fishermen's union maintains one of the largest canneries on the river itself, their endorsement of the bill proves conclusively that the measure would not in any way hurt the packing industry.

NEW CHURCH IDEA GROWS

Community House of Worship at Estacada Considered at Meeting

Estacada's hope for a community church, where creeds will not conflict, and where general support will enable the organization to do real work, received a decided boost last week at a well attended meeting held in the rooms of the Civic Improvement club. So great was the attendance that empty boxes had to be brought in to serve as additional seats.

At the close of the meeting a committee, consisting of R. M. Standish, A. O. Whitcomb, John Ely, W. W. Dillon, D. S. Flemming, F. B. Guthrie and W. H. Holder, was appointed to perfect plans for the community church and to report at a later date upon such progress had been made. During the evening discussion of the subject was had, brief remarks being made by John Ely, Walter Givens, F. B. Guthrie, W. W. Dillon, A. O. Whitcomb, Mrs. D. M. Marshall, Mrs. John Page, A. Demoy, Rev. Spiess, Lewis Jones, R. S. Coop, W. H. Holder and R. M. Standish.

Representatives of eight churches were among those present, Catholics, Methodists, Baptists, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Latter Day Saints, Christians and Reformed Christians all taking part. The very diversity of the creeds represented was an argument for some sort of consolidation into a workable and effective community church. At the opening of the meeting G. E. Williams, an evangelist, offered prayer, and the discussion that followed was earnest and gave promise of early results.

Maybe He's a Prohibitionist

Prospects of Dr. E. R. Todd winning out in the race for the U. S. presidential chair appear better every day. This week word was received from Mr. Evans who moved to Illinois from Molalla about a year ago that he would support Dr. Todd in the coming elections. With Illinois and Oregon lined up it is only a matter of time till the other states fall in line.—(Molalla Pioneer.)

The municipal judge and the city attorney in Portland are going to put some more teeth in the dry law. Judging from the drunks in Portland what is really needed is somebody to clamp down the lid.

Talk about insults: Oregon City's fire chief said the city ought to have motor-equipped fire engines, and then somebody went and sent the council catalogues describing motorcycle fire engines that ran on three wheels. What do they think the county seat is, anyway?
