Rumored that Name of Another Candidate Will Be Written by Democrats

Notable otherwise for its extreme vacuity, the spiritless "mourning" Enterprise, which has a foolishly conceived notion that it is the republican party and that it also controls the sentiment of the democratic party, launches a vague attack upon The Courier for its position regarding the candidacy of Maxwell Viotor, who seeks the democratic nomination as sheriff.

It is said that The Enterprise cannot keep its nose more closely to the republican grindstone and let the democratic party take care of its own trials and tribulations. There is enough rottenness within republican ranks to require the entire attention of the "mourning" paper, and its most recent tampering in democratic affairs sounds greatly like the cry of a guilty conscience. Surely such a sanctimoniously upright sheet as The Enterprise would not stoop to such things. Surely that morning medium of defamation could not presume upon its own good will to dictate the course of democratic primary elections, and certainly it cannot presume upon the good will of its readers to tell the voters what they shall do at the primary election.

Nothing seems beyond the province of such a paper. Its self-esteem is too great to allow any chance to discredit persons or institutions to escape it.

J. E. Hedges, a regularly registered democrat, did say that he would not cast his ballot for Viotor. The Courier has no reason to take exception to such remarks by Mr. Hedges or any one else. Good democrats, like good republicans, reserve the right to cast their ballot as they choose at the general election. Fortunately the statutes of this state make it necessary for party affiliates to vote for their partisans at the primaries, and, although the thing has escaped the magnificently comprehensive mind of The Enterprise, the primary election is all that The Courier and the voters are concerned with at this time.

Mr. Hedges, as a democrat, will have no opportunity at the primary election, of voting for even one of the eight republicans whom he could select in preference to the democratic candidate. Therefore, in spite of the magnanimous dictation of our blessed contemporary, Mr. Hedges is required to vote for a democratic candidate. Such being the facts in the case, which has not failed to draw as much study as it has idle chatter from The Enterprise, Mr. Hedges and other democrats, who are graced with minds that think farther than The Enterprise mind, will write in the name of E. T. Mass, or another democrat. Thus the party will avoid the terrible thing that The Enterprise sees in the nomination of Viotor. If Viotor should be nominated then Mr. Hedges, like a great number of democrats, would vote for one of the eight republicans.

For the satisfaction of the dissatisfied Enterprise we willingly admit that, were Maxwell Viotor nominated, he would easily be defeated by the strongest republican nominee at the general election. But Viotor has not been nominated, and the general election is several months away. Unfortunately for the eleventh-hour entrant he is not a taxpayer in this county and is comparatively little known. E. T. Mass, on the other hand, has a large following, is a heavy taxpayer and has an excellent chance of receiving the nomination.

The Enterprise, in its simple, absent-minded and utterly ridiculous attempt to discredit the statement of The Courier, is off on a tangent such as characterizes its attitude on all questions. It argues something after the fashion of a fish, pulling and tugging at something that resists its efforts, and eventually getting the gaff in its flabby sides; a fight which can but result in its own chagrin and harm to its own constitution. The Enterprise plays a game that cannot win. Its attempts to dictate when its dictation is ridiculous, and it sticks its hard nose into the business of politics and public affairs that concerns that lovely and sanctified sheet in absolutely no manner. Such is the love of self of The Enterprise that it cannot see the object flaws in itself or the party which it represents with defamation and discredit. Rather it goes outside its sphere to tamper maliciously with the affairs of the democratic party, and therein lie facts that reflect very creditably upon the democratic party.

MILWAUKIE COUNCIL BREWING TROUBLE

ATTEMPT TO REDUCE SALARY OF MARSHAL RILEY COMES BEFORE COUNCIL

Charging that City Marshal, Sam Riley, has been shirking his duty, the Milwaukie city council, in meeting on Monday evening, continued its attempt to have the marshal discharged. The meeting of the aldermen was a quiet affair and was devoted to the hearing of charges against the marshal. Councilmen allege that Riley is attending too closely to affairs not among the duties he is paid for.

The trouble started several weeks ago when the council in an endeavor to jar Riley loose from his job, reduced his salary $15 per month, from $75. Then, when the city took over the Milwaukie Water works and started work upon its new water system, the council conceived the idea of having a city manager, one who would fill about every known office in the city from dog catcher and chicken chaser to manager of the water system, marshal and peace officer included. The council asked Riley, who had been elected by the people, to resign. This Riley refused to do, and continued to remain on the job. The citizens at this juncture took a hand in affairs and presented a petition signed by over 200 people, asking that the council rescind its former action and also put Riley's salary back at the old figure. The council refused to even hear the petition read, for its honesty and integrity was questioned in the petition, so the members declared. Riley continuing to remain on the job, the council then proceeded to bring charges against him in its effort to get him off the job entirely. It is claimed that Riley draws fees from the county in addition to what he gets from the city; that he has hired work done which the city had to pay, and which Riley was supposed to do himself; that he would not enforce the ordinances without some citizens making a complaint, and that he has failed to do many other things which came within his department.

Riley declares he will now present his side to the public with counter charges against the council, and the end is not yet in sight. He further declares that every charge of the council is untrue.

L. R. ALDERMAN TALKS ON PUBLIC SCHOOLS

MR. ZINK ADDRESSES LIVE WIRE
MEETING IN INTEREST OF
"TRADE AT HOME"

"The greatest tax that the country knows is the tax of ignorance, and the greatest asset it has is the child," said L. R. Alderman, city superintendent of schools in Portland, in his talk at the regular meeting of the Live Wires on Tuesday.

The solution of the social worries of the world is found in education, according to Mr. Alderman, and his forceful remarks left most of his hearers thoroughly convinced of their truth.

"If we could properly feed, clothe and educate every child in a single generation," said Mr. Alderman, "social problems would be solved."

But, as Mr. Alderman pointed out, the school system is not closely connected with life. The policy of "Bricks not boys," is an evil one and is doing much to overthrow the value of education. Petty criticism, favoritism, charity and politics are influences against the maximum benefit of education.

An interesting point in Mr. Alderman's talk was his expression of the opinion that the proportion of women to men as teachers in the public schools was too great. Too frequently the women teachers, who far outnumber the men, are not fitted for their positions because they have been placed there for the sake of charity, or because they have not studied life to an extent that would make possible the proper teaching of the children in their classrooms.

D. C. Zink, traveling freight and passenger agent of the P. R. L. & P. Co., delivered an interesting talk in support of the "Buy it in Oregon City" movement that is in the hands of the Live Wires. He brought out the value of an educational campaign among school children as a desirable plan to further the campaign. Mr. Zink showed many interesting examples of the benefit to be derived from support of home industry and home merchants.

The committee in charge of the plans for a Clackamas county armory to be located in this city, made a brief report, and Manager H. L. Kelly of the Rose Festival queen campaign reported on recent plans.

The Live Wires furnished a splendid luncheon, which included very few things not produced by local industry. Salmon was the feature of the menu, and the finishing touch was loganberry pie.

Ever notice, reader, how so many good ideas wither in the winds of time for want of execution?

DEMAND HEARING ON TOOZE CHARGE

ANONYMOUS CIRCULAR HITS
F. J. TOOZE, CITY SCHOOL
SUPERINTENDENT

ECHO FROM RECENT TRIAL

Hints That Incumbent Is Morally and Intellectually Unfit for Duties of Office

Not content with the decision rendered by Judge Campbell in the circuit court last week, an unknown has prepared and circulated a printed demand for a hearing of the charges against City School Superintendent F. J. Tooze. The circular contains a long and detailed statement of the actions of the city school board in handling the charges against the city superintendent, and is urgent in its demand for a public hearing.

The school board is criticized for its methods, and is scored for the manner in which it re-elected Mr. Tooze, alleging that a special meeting was called as soon as Judge Campbell had handed down a decision in favor of the superintendent, and Mr. Tooze was immediately re-elected.

"The Third Element," purporting to be "taxpayers of no mean proportions," signs the circular that has been distributed. It reads in part as follows:

"Since trouble in our high school has been so aired in public, and there is so much dissatisfaction among patrons with existing conditions, it is public opinion that this matter should be settled once and for all.

"The man entrusted to superintend the education, and incidentally the moral welfare of our splendid generation of rising boys and girls, should, above all things, be a man with character above the slightest suspicion; of whom there could be no hint of dishonesty, untruthfulness, or acts of a sinister character; a man who would blush to create any aspersion of manipulation to make himself solid with this or that influential parent or with the board to whom he looks for re-election. In short, he should personify broad character and absolute honesty.

"There exists a question of doubt as to the ability of the present incumbent to measure up to the above standard, in view of the fact that at least seven of the high school teachers have so expressed themselves, some of them describing conditions as intolerable. It is also known that two thirds of the board endeavored to have a hearing upon the complaint of these dissatisfied teachers, but for reasons best known to themselves, perhaps, the three directors, who later re-elected the present superintendent, objected.

"It seems rather strange to the public in general that the board was so hasty in re-electing their man at a special meeting immediately following Judge Campbell's decision regarding his certification. This election was conducted in a manner which should suggest an intention to 'put one over' on the public in a sort of defiant attitude. . . . No doubt there is a reason why these three members of the board did not see fit to investigate the trouble, but as the board is chosen by the public to serve the public welfare, their acts should be public property, and those members, who are not inclined to investigate unsatisfactory conditions with the hope of correcting them, should make known to the public their reason for allowing this thing to prevail.

"—There was a mess of trouble last year and trouble the year before, and the public demands that for the good of the school and the community and the welfare of those whose characters are being moulded, that this thing be now dealt with intelligently and impartially without regard to what side this or that fellow may support.

"It is unjust that the board should attempt to settle this question without consulting both sides, and the public demands a square deal, alike to teachers, superintendent and pupils, and when the board shows a disposition to deal openly and above board in this matter of vital public concern, the public will stand by the final result.

"This letter is supported by taxpayers of no mean proportions, and with the sincere desire to see justice done all round, and to prevent our schools from becoming the synonym for strife throughout the state, where trouble, year after year, seems to be a required subject upon the curriculum."

"THE THIRD ELEMENT"

Economy is the by-word of the nineteenth of the candidates in the primary field. How speedily will that gracious quality be forgotten ten minutes after the oath of office is taken by nine-tenths of those who promise?

PLANS FOR QUEEN CONTEST ARE MADE

SOCIAL FEATURES WILL AID IN PILING UP VOTES FOR
MISS UPTEGROVE

The Woman's club, represented by Mrs. N. M. Alldredge and several assistants, is credited with meritorious work in connection with the campaign that is being conducted to elect Miss Rose Uptegrove of Oregon City as queen of the Rose Festival. Under Mrs. Alldredge's direction the button sale which was held on Saturday netted a total of 63,400 votes for the queen candidate, and $31.70 was turned into the campaign committee after the sale. The entire supply of buttons was sold out early in the afternoon.

Miss Uptegrove herself took a prominent part in the sale of buttons, and succeeded in disposing of about fifty of the celluloid discs. A heavy sale was recorded at the paper mills, where young ladies were conducted on a sales tour by members of the bachelor committee in charge of the campaign.

The success of the campaign as far as it has been carried on has been entirely satisfactory and the outlook for the immediate future is such that the committee and Campaign Manager H. L. Kelly are confident of their success. Outside of Oregon City a great deal of interest has been displayed in the contest and on Monday afternoon Manager Kelly made a trip to Canby, where he arranged for a dance on Saturday evening, May 13. Other communities will aid in some way in causing the election of the Clackamas county candidate and the Canby dance is probably only the first of a series that will be held about the county.

A bevy of local young ladies are planning upon a leap-year dancing party to be held in the near future, and other local social events are being arranged. Manager Kelly is in a position to announce some of these events as the plans of their sponsors are only tentative.

The spirit of the campaign has taken general hold throughout the county and has been the inspiration among the pupils at the Oregon City high school to lay plans for a play-let to be presented within the next few weeks for the benefit of the campaign fund. Details of the students' plans have been nearly completed and they are anxious to display their interest in a practical way.

The valiant efforts of the bachelor committee, working under the auspices of the Live Wires, are responsible for the success attained thus far in Miss Uptegrove's campaign. The committee, consisting of J. D. Olson, chairman, H. L. Kelly, Charles Parker, H. A. Swafford, Harry Draper, Dr. J. A. VanBrakel and Dr. Frank Mount, is behind several worthy ideas that will be put into execution before the campaign has advanced much farther, and by properly applying its energies is bringing about what appears to be the assured success of the contest on behalf of the Clackamas county candidate.

Mr. Kelly, who is devoting his entire time to the management of the campaign, points out the value of the contest to the county, and expresses the belief that its merits should appeal to the loyal side of all who can in any way assist the committee. As an advertising feature, Mr. Kelly says, there have been few things presented which offer greater opportunities, and the publicity to be derived from the election of Miss Uptegrove would not only be of material value to this city but to all the county.

Barclay Honor Roll
The following pupils of the seventh and the first and second grades in the Barclay school of Oregon City, by virtue of the excellency of their classroom work during the month of April, are placed upon the roll of honor for that month:

Benefit Game at Canby
A benefit ball game is to be played at Canby on Sunday and a large share of the proceeds of the contest are to be used in buying votes for Miss Rose Uptegrove, candidate for Rose Festival queen. A large number of Oregon City people, and those living in and around Canby, will attend the game. Manager Kelly, of the queen candidate's campaign, is anxious to have a large part of the audience made up of Oregon City people. The game is called for three o'clock.

Little Tots Return
Accompanied by their aunt, Mrs. J. Askew of Oregon City, little Virginia and Gladys Harbottle of White Horse, Yukon territory, Alaska, are planning to leave soon for their home. The little ladies have been visiting in Oregon City for some time as guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bigger, their grandparents. They came here alone from their northern home and will return alone after their aunt leaves them in British Columbia.

COUNCIL TABLES TWO AFFIDAVITS

ACCUSED COUNCILMAN VAN
AUKEN GIVES STATEMENT
DENYING CHARGES

CONSIDER MUNICIPAL PLANT

Finance Committee Recommends Donation of City Property for County Armory

Subscribed and sworn to before a notary public, the following affidavit was presented to the honorable mayor and city council at its regular meeting on Wednesday evening by Councilman E. D. Van Auker, who was incriminated on a charge of attempted extortion in an affidavit presented at a special meeting last week by I. Shockley, former operator of the municipal elevator:

One, I, Shockley, having made an affidavit reflecting upon me as a member of this body, a copy of which affidavit is hereto attached and made a part hereof, I desire at this time to deny fully and completely every statement and allegation contained in said affidavit wherein it states that I made an offer to said I. Shockley that if he would donate about $5 I would fix it so said Shockley could stay as operator of the elevator in Oregon City, said statement being absolutely untrue and false in every particular, and as a member of this body I demand a full and complete investigation and hearing and think and feel that this council and the mayor ought to make a complete investigation and have a public hearing of the matter.

Dated, Oregon City, Ore., April 29, 1916.

E. D. VAN AUKEN.

Immediately after the reading of Mr. Van Auker's affidavit Councilman Cox bobbed up with a motion to lay the affidavit, and the charges attached to it, on the table. The motion was seconded by Buckles in the very brief space of time between its expression and outburst from Councilmen Metzner and Templeton. The latter said:

"I do not believe these charges should be set aside. To do so is a reflection upon this council and upon Mr. Van Auker. I think he would not want the charges laid on the table."

The mayor called for a vote on the Cox motion and with only Metzner and Templeton voting "no," the two affidavits were tabled, thus ending the "Van Auker affair," which sprung up so suddenly in the meeting last week.

Both Councilmen Templeton and Metzner indicated by their remarks later, however, that the matter was not off the boards and that someone would be made to answer.

With the prompt culmination of the warfare the regular order of business was started off with a granting of an extension of time to contractors who are at work on the Tenth street improvement, and the granting of a half-year license for a pool and billiard hall.

Recorder Loder read a report of the council finance committee, which recommended the donation of the Cross block for the erection thereon of a Clackamas county national guard armory. The recommendation carried the proviso, however, that the county could donate $8,000, the value of the block, and that the state donate a sum equal to the donations of the city and county. This would provide the lot and $24,000 for the erection of the building. The report was accepted.

George Randall, a member of the Live Wire armory committee, reported to the council on a meeting with officers of the national guard at Portland, and apologized for the absence of Christian Schuebel, city attorney and another member of the Live Wire committee. Mr. Randall explained that, as Mr. Schuebel was engaged in a game of billiards he could not report for the committee.

Evidently Mr. Schuebel suffered defeat at the club for he appeared just after Mr. Randall had spoken, and took his seat in the council chamber.

Routine reports were accepted at the meeting, and a detailed report covering the re-establishment of groves on Main street between Seventh and Tenth streets and on Seventh street, were read and accepted. Ordinances providing for these changes passed the first reading and were set for final reading on May 11.

May 17 was set by the council as the date for the hearing of objections from taxpayers on the Tenth street sewer district assessments.

Mayor Hackett reported to the meeting the result of an interview with the mayor of McMinnville, and presented other information, regarding the advisability of building a municipal electric plant in Oregon City. He will have data and further information for the council at a later date.

"I believe the establishment of a municipal light plant would be a

BIG ADDITION MADE TO LOCAL PAYROLL

HAWLEY PAPER COMPANY IN-CREASES PAY OF 325 EM-
PLOYES OF MILLS

Effective last Monday morning, the employees of the Hawley Pulp and Paper company of Oregon City, were granted a ten per cent. increase in salary, the advance to effect all departments and all employees. The announcement of the advance of wages at the mills in this city was not made until Wednesday by W. P. Hawley, Sr., and comes as a very pleasant surprise to 325 men who are employed in the various departments of the large mills.

According to an estimate made by company officials, the increase which was granted on Wednesday will cost the company approximately $35,000 a year. It is the result of faithful service and loyalty on the part of employees that the increase was made, as the Hawley mills are preparing for a season of great prosperity, which will be assisted upon the completion of the extensive additions that are being made to the plant and its equipment.

The price of paper has made rapid advances within the past few months, and the employees of the mills here have been exerting every effort to improve the quality of local products. In view of these facts the management has seen fit to give those who have worked in the company's interest a share in the increased profits. Laborers and office workers share alike in the increase.

The Hawley mills run on a two-shift schedule, the day shift of eleven hours and the night shift of thirteen hours. All time put in over and above ten hours a day, however, is paid at the rate of time and a half, so that in reality the shifts are each of ten hours. The workmen who work on the day shift have been paid at the rate of $2.18, but under the new paying plan will have this amount increased to $2.40 a day. Heretofore laborers on the night shift have received $2.75 for their work, and this has been increased to $3.00.

MAY GET AEROPLANE FOR BOOSTER DAY

BUSINESSMEN MEET ON TUES-DAY TO DISCUSS DETAILS OF BOOSTER PROGRAM

A group of businessmen were called together for a meeting at the Commercial club rooms on Tuesday afternoon by the Booster day committee of the Live Wires and spent a profitable hour in the discussion of plans for the celebration which is to be held in Oregon City on Saturday, May 27.

If the committee can possibly arrange it, the big feature of the celebration will be the appearance here of an aeroplane, in the hands of one of the most prominent aviators on the coast. The committee will communicate with the aviator in mind and will make a contract with him if satisfactory terms can be agreed upon. The suggestion to substitute automobile races for the aeroplane flights was entertained and may be given consideration by the committee.

The idea of holding a two-day Booster program was dropped after some discussion by the businessmen, as it is their idea to crowd the one day so full of interesting events as to make it memorable, rather than stretching out the time.

Various interesting features were suggested by those who attended the meeting at which E. D. Eby presided. Street dances, parades and several other ideas will be considered by the committee as a result of the expressions gained at the general meeting on Tuesday.

Suggestions regarding the holding of the rose show in a place set aside for it on one of the public streets were heard by the committee. It has been customary for the Oregon City Rose society, in charge of the rose show in the past, to stage this interesting feature within a building, but the society has turned over arrangements this year to the Booster day committee and it may decide to make the rose show an open air event. At any rate this will form an important attraction on Booster Day and it is to be made thoroughly representative of the entire county. Prizes will be awarded for displays from all sections, and in no way will the show be confined to Oregon City and this immediate territory.

Another important part of the celebration from the viewpoint of the farmer will be the stock show. This is to be worked out along more extensive lines than heretofore and the representation will be county-wide. Already farmers and stockmen in many parts of the county have expressed their interest in the stock show and the committee is assured a larger and better selection of animals than has ever been shown here before.

You can get the Courier for one year for $1.00—if you pay in advance.

COUNTY SCHOOLS ABOUT TO CLOSE

SUPERINTENDENT J. E. CALA-
VAN AND ASSISTANTS BUSY
AS YEAR END COMES

MANY STANDARD SCHOOLS

Review of Successful Year in the Schools of Clackamas County
Various Agencies Active

Clackamas county's most successful school year is closing, and as the final days approach County Superintendent J. E. Calavan, Supervisor Brenton Vedder and their helpers are belabored with a thousand odd jobs that must be cleaned up before the spring term can be said to have passed.

Building operations in the schools of the county have not been so extensive as in past years, but a normal growth has been evident, with Milwaukie and Oregon City getting new school houses. Oregon City is a first class school district, therefore outside the scope of the work of the county superintendent's office, but that department must list the activities of this community as a part of the accomplishments of the county school system. As to the building, next year will probably see so much construction of schools that the lack during the present year will not be noticed. Superintendent Calavan reports the probability of new school buildings at Teasle Creek, Milwaukie and Echo Dell.

In the school year of 1914-1915, much building was done and these school houses are listed as new: Molalla, Colton, Meadow Brook, Union, Elliott Prairie, Bolton and Milwaukie.

There are 125 schools within the limits of Clackamas county, maintained solely by this county, and in addition to these there are twelve joint school districts, in the maintenance of which this county cooperates with Multnomah, Marion, Yamhill and Washington counties. There are about three hundred teachers employed by the county schools and there are some 7,500 pupils. The school census of the county is 11,578, but this includes a number of children too young for school and some who have passed that age.

Among the accomplishments of the school year that the superintendent's office can well be proud of is the standardization of twelve schools. With thirty-two standardized up to this year the total number of schools having received sufficient credits to merit standardization honors is thirty-four. Conscientious work has been done throughout the county, by teachers and pupils alike, to merit standardization, and though all the schools have not been successful their efforts have resulted in a great improvement in the entire system. The progress of those schools trying for standardization credits has been remarkable. Improvements have been made in the school buildings and in the surroundings that will count greatly toward meeting standard school requirements next fall.

Some of the schools that are listed as standard have not yet received formally that distinction, but as quickly as the superintendent or supervisor can reach them they are being certified. In most cases the schools that have become standard have celebrated the event with a rally at which pupils, parents and teachers joined hands in a pleasant gathering.

The schools that will be of standard class before the end of the year are: Canby, Willamette, Bolton, West Linn, Oswego, Molalla, Milwaukie, Kemsley, Gladstone, Bear Creek, Beaver Creek and Barlow.

Both County Superintendent Calavan and Supervisor Vedder are enthusiastic in their praise of the interesting work of the many Parent-Teachers' associations in the county. That great good is accomplished by these organizations is evident from results obtained and the parents of each community are alive to the advantages that come through such associations. They have helped encourage teachers and pupils and have resulted in better work on the part of both. The associations have been instrumental in the success of many big school meetings and in the improvement of conditions and property of the schools of the county.

Throughout the year the superintendent and Mr. Vedder have been working diligently in connection with the extension departments of the O. C. and the state university, to build up industrial club activities in the county schools. Greater progress has been made in this field during the year than ever before and the school year that is without an industrial club certainly has some good reason for its failure to organize. There are twenty-five clubs in various schools and their progress is manifested in the interest taken in them by the children.

The premium list for the industrial
