

Tells Her Experience To Benefit Others

Mrs. Dunlap Sends Letter Addressed to the Readers of the Paper

A sense of duty to others who might suffer as she had impelled Mrs. R. C. Dunlap of Dekalb, Mo., to send the following signed statement to the St. Joseph, Mo., News Press:

"The readers of the News-Press, especially those suffering from gall-stones, stomach trouble and appendicitis, will find in Fruitola and Traxo a permanent cure. After suffering for three years the most excruciating pain from gall-stones I found this wonderful remedy and am now in perfect health and have been for almost four years. Never have any symptoms of the old trouble. I had been told by three doctors that nothing but an operation would save me. I know several who have undergone an operation but still have gall-stones. This medicine is an oil which softens the stones and cures the liver. It can be bought at any drug store."

Fruitola is an intestinal lubricant that softens the congested masses, disintegrates the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, and expels the accumulation to the patient's great relief. Traxo is a tonic-alterative that acts on the liver and kidneys, stimulates the flow of gastric juices to aid digestion, and removes bile from the general circulation.

Fruitola and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In Oregon City, Portland, Canby and Hubbard they can be obtained at Huntley Bros. Co.'s Drug stores.

THE FASHIONS

Although the fashions are still undergoing changes—and before summer is fairly here, we shall probably find many novelties which have as yet not put in an appearance—for street wear, at least, styles are established. The panniers, bustles, ruffles, wired hip pockets, and other weird effects are relegated to the house for evening and afternoons.

The Morning Walk on the Avenue

One is gratified at the simple, trim street suits and the smart little frocks of taffeta and other silks which greet our eyes in a morning walk on the Avenue. The jackets of the serge, gabardine, and novelty wool suits are hip or knee length, fitted well through the shoulders and at the waist, which is usually a trifle raised, and are finished with full basques. The skirts, many of them, are of the circular gored models, and hang full and gracefully from the top of a high inside belt. The effect of these packets, worn with this type of skirt, or with one of the numerous pleated models which are equally popular, is exceedingly smart; and more to the point, perhaps, most becoming to all types of figure.

Styles Which Conceal Either Slenderness or Avoiridupois

The spring and summer styles, many of them, seem to be designed with the idea of concealing slenderness, but at the same time, fortunately, they serve equally well to conceal an overabundance of flesh. For instance, let us consider the fitted packet with waist raised slightly above the normal, and the full, fan-tail coat, pleated or flared; such a model, while softening to angles, also straightens out curves most effectively. These coats, originated by Mme. Paquin, will in all probability be the features of the spring and summer tailored suits of serge, linen, or novelty sport materials.

The Charming Summer Silk Frocks

We have too thoroughly enjoyed the comfort and becomingness of the simple one-piece frock of silk to let it disappear from view even for a summer. They are being used for the street, for the house, and for evening wear this season, being even more popular than for the past season or two. Plain, crisp taffetas are used in their fashioning, soft crepes, and crepe de Chines, foulards and printed silks in checked and flowered effects. Mme. Callot sends us a charming little model of plain navy blue taffeta, combined with Pompadour silk; it has a full, gathered skirt of the plain blue, and a quaint corsage and bustle effect of the Pompadour silk, in its soft, delicate colorings. There is a quaint laced bodice which lends a dainty touch. The sleeves and body portion of the waist are of white lawn, and the belt-girdle is laced over the bust and held in place with shoulder straps.

There are a number of interesting sleeveless coats or three-piece dress effects which strongly appeal to many. These are taffeta or satin, and are to a great extent replacing the short capes introduced a little earlier.

Belts and Girdles Again in Favor

One of the most interesting details of the smart little summer frocks, both of silk and wash fabrics, is the girdle. This is made of ribbon, one of the flowered or figured taffetas, an attractive Oriental silk, or a metal embroidered novelty; and for the serge frock or suit, the various leathers, suede, patent leather, buckskin, or a novelty of novelties, antelope skin. The ordinary silk girdle now measures at least four inches in width at its narrowest point, and at its widest, often from nine to twelve inches. The widest point is directly in front, the point as a rule coming down over the front of the skirt. In some instances the point extends both up on the corsage and down below; this of course is nothing more or less than the quaint, fascinating bodice of our grandmothers' days. Others of the ribbon girdles are trimmed at the ends with wide sash ends, gathered straight to the belt and forming a half tunic effect, with ribbon ruffling at the bottom; or again, the sash ends are attached to the girdle at the sides, hang to the knees and are turned back on themselves and caught at the back. Suspender trimmings, sash bows, rosettes, and all forms of ribbon trimmings are tremendously favored.

Narrow belts of leather, antelope, suede, buck and other soft-finished qualities, are used as a finish to serge frock or tailored suit. Wool embroidery plays an important part on girdles too, being deftly introduced to lend a note of sharp contrast to suit or frock.

A very popular Russian blouse dress is illustrated here, fashioned of crepe Georgette and satin; it is sashed with the Georgette, in a graceful knotted girdle. The frock of serge and organza is an adaptation of Poiret's Pearl Grise, exhibited at the Plaza some months ago; it is a model that is well liked and becoming.

Perhaps the most noticeable thing about the summer styles is their decided youthfulness; this is both in line and coloring. The straight lined frocks and suits of serge, gabardine, taffeta and faille, lend grace and youth to all types of figure. For instance, a yoked, pleated frock of dark blue serge trimmed with black taffeta may be worn by the large woman or the small one with equally good results. One particularly good model worn by a large woman, at an exhibition recently, was made with a deep shoulder yoke of black taffeta, the serge laid in deep, flat pleats, hanging straight from the yoke. A girdle, consisting of two narrow stitched straps of the black silk, came well down over the hips, giving a long slender appearance to a rather heavy figure. A pretty adaptation of the same style of dress is illustrated here in serge for the slender, younger woman.

Satin is effective with serge; and of course the combination of navy blue serge and black satin is quite as popular this season again as it has been for several seasons past. One sees many smart serge frocks with sleeveless coats of black satin, half skirts of satin, sleeves of satin, and the various other notions favored for the modish combining of two or more contrasting materials. Scarcely a frock appears these days made strictly of one material. It is a fad which makes for economy and becomingness.

Hand Painting on Sport Costumes

The sport costume is another youthful notion. It imparts a delightful feeling of freedom, both of movement and spirit. There is something very becoming and exhilarating about the combinations of vivid colorings in the wide striped, checked, and printed novelty fabrics now being used in skirts and suits. The middie-bloose costume is popular with all; one of the new materials being used for middies is an adaptation of the old-fashioned jean. This material wears quite as well as its old-time blue predecessor, is reasonably priced, and a most satisfactory material generally for middie blouses and accompanying skirt. An effective combination for a middie costume is one of the bright awning striped linens or ducks, with blouse of plain white, collared and cuffed in the stripes. One of New York's smart shops is showing a middie blouse which flares smartly over the hips; the idea is novel and attractive in its up-to-dateness, quite in accordance with the season's silhouette.

The hand-painted or stencilled hat has been a fad for some time, its vivid parrots, chameleons, conventionalized flowers and fruits, harmonizing and blending in charmingly with the sport suit or frock. While many of us have misgivings as to the durability of the colors when the sun takes a hand, and beats down mercilessly on their gorgeous tones, still the idea is most attractive and becoming, and so easily carried out, that even if the colors do fade they may be quickly and readily restored; therefore, we may go a step farther and have hand-painted neckwear to match hat, or complete the suit. Georgette crepe is usually the material chosen for these collars and ties, with now and then one of Chinese crepe or a loosely woven linen. The motifs range in coloring from pale, softly tinted blossoms to gaily plumaged birds and vividly colored flowers and fruits of tropical origin. The notion is not confined to sport suits by any means; many a simple little serge frock has been given its note of chic by the addition of one of these collars or ties. In hats, too, the idea is toned down and made effective use of in tailored millinery.

There are hand-painted belts of suede and antelope-skin being shown, offering another effective way of introducing a bit of color in a dark linen or serge costume. Some of the most effective ones shown this year are of suede, in the favored soft blues, greens, and lavenders, either stencilled with flowers, or finished with beaded motifs and ornaments. One imported novelty has a bead flower applied at the center-back, and is closed in front with another rose to match.

Another pretty suggestion for the young girl is illustrated here in the effective combination of plain and plaid voile.

Foulards are being used extensively again this year; there is no silk, it seems, half as satisfactory for the summer silk frock for afternoons and for church. A most attractive dress, shown recently, was fashioned of polka-dotted foulard, a dark blue dot on a white ground, trimmed with bandings, collar and cuffs of plain, dark blue foulard. Foulard wears well, and is soft and cool.

CANTINE TO REMAIN

Lewis Fails in Attempt to Rid Office of Deputy

Upon the unanimous recommendation of Secretary of State Olcott, State Treasurer Kay and the members of the advisory board of the State Highway commission, Governor Withycombe has refused to accept the recommendation of State Engineer Lewis that the services of Chief Deputy Engineer Cantine with the State Highway Department be dispensed with.

Governor Withycombe presented the matter to the other members of the highway commission and the advisory board Monday, pointing out that while he had the appointment of the chief deputy engineer under the law and presumably the right of dismissing him, he wished to ascertain the views of the commission and advisory board. At the commission's meeting last month, Lewis had recommended that Cantine be dismissed on the ground that there was little work in the department for him to do now, that it would save the state money and that it would restore harmony in the department.

Lewis reiterated his reasons for wishing Cantine dismissed, but found little sympathy for his proposal. All members of the commission and the advisory board expressed the belief that Cantine was a valuable man, and that some work might be found for him.

"I cannot help but think," said John Albert, of the advisory board, "that Mr. Lewis' reasons are a mere pretext."

Mr. Albert called attention to the law, declaring that Lewis was only a creature of the commission, and that the commission had authority to direct the state highway work, assigning to Cantine such work as they saw fit. He said that Lewis' recommendation of dismissal for Cantine would mean, if followed, the disregard of the law providing that a chief deputy engineer "versed in a scientific road construction" should be retained by the highway department.

"It would be a mistake to let Mr. Cantine go at the present time," said S. Benson, a member of the advisory board. "I am personally acquainted with Mr. Cantine and have much regard for his ability." Mr. Butler, of the advisory board, also said he had high regard for the chief deputy.

State Treasurer Kay fired a number of queries at the state engineer, intimating that, with the direction of the State Engineering department, State Water board and Desert Land board, Lewis should have his hands full without insisting upon doing all the work in the State Highway department as well.

Governor Withycombe interposed with the statement that he understood Lewis now had the direction of the expenditure of approximately $600,000, and wished to assume the burden of expending an additional $230,000 belonging to the State Highway department. Engineer Lewis denied that he had so much money at his disposal.

Corn Show at St. Paul

One of the important agricultural events of the northwest for 1916 will be the second annual "First National" corn show, which will be held in St. Paul, Minnesota, December 11-16, inclusive. Contests will be open to every farmer and farmer's son in the northwest.

The corn show territory will remain the same as last year, and includes the following states, divided into districts as shown: Minnesota, six districts; northwestern Wisconsin, two; North Dakota, six; South Dakota, six; Montana, six; Washington, three; Idaho, three; Oregon, two. One hundred and thirty-six silver and "goldyn bronze" loving cups will be awarded as prizes. Competition will be divided into a men's and boys' class and is confined to districts only, there being no competition between states or between districts.

The geographical divisions for the two districts in Oregon are as follows:

District No. 1—Counties of Hood River, Wasco, Sherman, Gilliam, Morrow, Umatilla, Union, Walla, Baker, Grant, Wheeler, Crook, Malheur, Harney, Lake, Klamath and Jefferson.

District No. 2—Counties of Clatsop, Columbia, Tillamook, Washington, Multnomah, Clackamas, Yamhill, Polk, Marion, Lincoln, Benton, Linn, Douglas, Coos, Curry, Josephine, Jackson and Lane.

Increased interest in corn production means the ultimate raising and maintenance of more livestock and diversification in farming methods, to the financial advantage and prosperity of the entire Northwest.

Pamphlets giving full details regarding the second annual "First National" corn show and form of entry blank, may be secured on application from the Bank of Commerce of this city.

Issues Sample Ballot

Euphuistic and poetic are some of the slogans adopted by the many party candidates listed in the sample ballot distributed by the secretary of state last week. Three political parties are represented in the pamphlet, although the progressives are into the political arena only with candidates for delegates to the national convention.

AFTER GRIPPE

Vinol Restored Mr. Martin's Strength
Wapakoneta, Ohio.—"I am a farmer by occupation, and the gripe left me with a bad cough and in a nervous, weak, run-down condition, and I could not seem to get anything to do me any good until I took Vinol which built me up, and my cough and nervousness are all gone, and I can truly say Vinol is all that is claimed for it."—JAMES MARTIN.
Vinol is a constitutional remedy for all weak, nervous and run-down conditions of men, women and children, and for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis.

tion of the party and for presidential electors.

In a great majority of the campaign and ballot slogans adopted by the candidates economy is the keynote. Economy of all kinds and varieties is promised, and many express their intention of cutting out the unnecessary law-making that is accomplished in the state legislature; a promise designed as an attractive blessing to the voters. One campaigner goes farther than most others in his slogan by promising "to fight for the people if necessary." The sample ballot can be obtained from the secretary of state.

INDIANS MAY FISH

Judge Wolverton Returns Decision in Favor of Natives

The right of Indians to fish in the Columbia river at Wah-Sucks point, in accord with their treaty with the government, was upheld in a decision rendered in federal court at Portland on Monday by Judge Charles E. Wolverton.

The decision not only upholds one of the most important treaties ever made with the Indians, but it establishes the rights of the red men to use the most advanced methods of fishing, instead of using dipnets, which, it had been contended, were all they were entitled to use besides hook and line.

The Seufert Bros. company, against whom the decision goes, are enjoined from interfering with the Indians in their fishing operations.

Both of the two main questions involved in the suit were decided in favor of the government. These questions were whether Wah-Sucks point was a usual and accustomed Indian fishing place, and whether the treaty protected the Indians in fishing on the south or Oregon bank of the Columbia. "Yes" is the decision's answer to both questions.

The suit was brought by the government as ward of the Yakima tribes and bands in general and on behalf of Sam Williams, a Yakima Indian, in particular, as wards of the United States. Judge Wolverton decided that Williams has so far severed his tribal relations as not to be included in the privileges granted by the treaty, but to have only such rights as any other citizen.

This decision may have some effect in favor of Indians on the Siletz reservation and other parts of the country, where litigation has been started in behalf of the redmen.

GUARD CAMP IN JULY

Captain Blanchard Receives News of Dates and New Rule

Captain Blanchard, commanding Company G, O. N. G., has received word from national guard headquarters that the annual encampment of the third infantry, of which the local company is a unit, will be held from July 5 to 14, inclusive, this year. The announcement was sent out after a conference of national guard officials, and the site for the annual training ground was not selected. It is thought probable, by Captain Blanchard, that the troops will be sent again to Gearhart Park, but there has been much talk in guard circles of a trip to American Lake, near Tacoma, Wash., which was formerly in much favor as a maneuver ground.

A rule that will be rigidly enforced this year is that which requires a guardsman to have been enlisted at least 60 days before he is eligible for the trip. In that many days the recruit must have attended at least four drills. With the present favorable outlook Captain Blanchard is hopeful of enlisting a good number of men in time to qualify them for encampment. The pleasure of the vacation, no matter where the troops are sent, and the fair remuneration for time spent, are held out as inducements to prospective candidates.

CHAMPOEG CELEBRATION

On Saturday Oregon Pioneers Will Commemorate Historic Day

Pioneers of the Oregon country, gathered at Champoege, on the Willamette, May 2, 1843, decided to organize a provisional government under the auspices of the United States rather than Great Britain. The sixteenth celebration in commemoration of this event will be held at Champoege, Saturday, May 6, instead of May 2, as formerly, the change being made so that school children and business people could attend.

Judge P. H. D'Arcy, of Salem, will preside. There will be reminiscent addresses by pioneers and music by the Portland Veteran quartet.

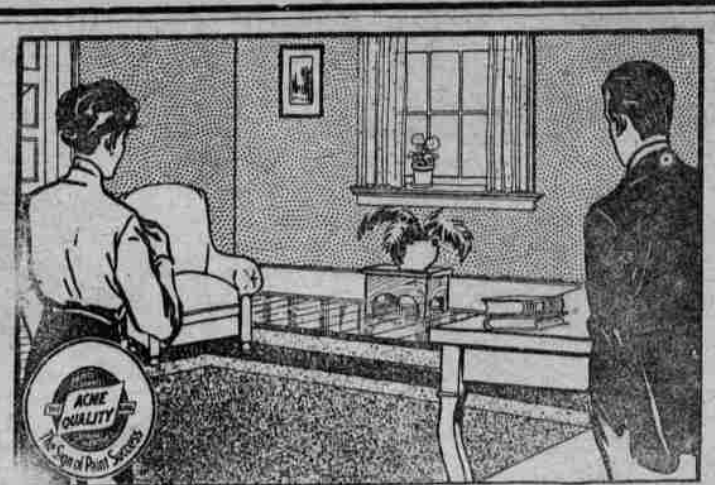

A boat will leave Portland early Saturday morning and the Clackamas county people may board it at Wilsonville. Arrangements will be made with the Oregon Electric to stop at Wilsonville in order that passengers by rail may intercept the boat there both in going up to Champoege and in returning.

PEACE AT GLADSTONE

Aldermanic Controversy Now Seems to be Settled

With the serenity of absolute peacefulness the Gladstone city council, its errant members and its dutiful members, met in regular session on Tuesday evening, for the first time since March. A split in the ranks of the body occurred at that time because of divergent views as to the management of the city water department. The council paired on the subject, with Goodman, Parrish and Clyde refusing to attend meetings with Sievers, Burdon and Clyde.

The citizens held a mass meeting early last week and appointed H. E. Cross, F. S. Baker and H. E. Williams on an arbitration committee to unite the council in an effort to transact the business of the city legally. As a result of the work of the peace committee both sides in the controversy grasped the olive branch and attended the session on Tuesday evening.

WILL HAVE RESORT

Woman's Club Members Discuss Establishment Soon

So much was done by the members of the Oregon City Woman's club at its meeting at the library Thursday, toward the establishment of a men's resort in this city, that a committee was appointed to investigate and lay tentative plans for the creation of such a place. The committee comprises Mrs. J. W. Norris, Mrs. D. M. Shanks and Mrs. G. A. Harding. This trio will confer with the Live Wires at a meeting of that body next week and will then report back to the Woman's club.

At the meeting last week A. R. Jacobs, president of the Oregon City Manufacturing company, spoke very strongly in favor of the idea of the club, praising the women of the organization for their interested effort in behalf of the working men of the city.

Upon the solicitation of H. L. Kelly, manager of the Rose Festival queen campaign, the ladies of the club promised their aid in assisting the local candidate by getting votes, and as a starter Mrs. N. M. Aldredge was appointed to have charge of the button sale that was held last Saturday.

Martin Recovers Machine

The prodigious automobile of H. L. Martin, 613 Main street, Oregon City, was recovered by the owner in Portland last Thursday after it had been stolen from a theatre entrance. Mr. Martin appealed to the sheriff's office on Thursday morning for aid in recovering his property and as soon as he had left the police station he found his machine, lights going full blast, just where it had been left by those who had taken it. The machine was in good condition when found and had probably been used during the evening by some gay joyrider.
