You always get more than your money's worth when you buy a Wirthmor Waist

The reason why they sell so well is not the least bit hard to tell.
They are simply—

better Waists

Yes, better by far than the ordinary dollar Waists or Waists frequently costing considerably more. Style—distinction—originality—character—all these you always get in the Wirthmor.

This we ask that you remember: the Wirthmor can be sold by just one good merchant in every city—and we caution you not to confuse them with any other because of similarity of packing.

TELLS A FANCIFUL POLITICAL TALE

is religiously harmonious, have no more right to see a joke in the democratic situation before the primaries than has The Enterprise to butt in where its "Butts" are not half so effective as the ignorance of the "but-ter" is pitiful.

We do not attempt to deny that Victor surprised the county when he filed as a democratic candidate. His action was unlooked for by the democratic voters, but if The Enterprise, which sees in that action the defeat of the party in the shrivelihood contest this month, will take the trouble, which is to it a great pleasure, to pester further in affairs that do not concern it, it will discover that the candidate will have strong opposition at the primaries. The Enterprise, with its love of self and its assumed power of dictation in matters democratic will not deny the democratic voters the right to vote as they please and if the friends of E. T. Mass choose to recognize the enviable record he made while serving in the sheriff's office they will write his name in in sufficient numbers to assure his election, in spite of the fact that Victor is a candidate, and in spite of the fact that The Enterprise mourns over the total destruction of the party slate, and the internal fear that it says has resulted from the filing of Victor.

The democratic voters are not looking forward to defeat and to avoid it will rally to the support of E. T. Mass. We again concede, lest the comprehensive intelligence of the wobbly mouthpiece of republicanism fail to grasp the statement at once, that Victor will not be powerful at the general election should he be nominated at the primaries. Unless the democratic voters, who are accused by our contemporary of having a badly shattered slate, offset it by writing in Mass' name, Victor's nomination will practically insure the election of the republican nominee, but we do not retract the statement that democrats throughout the county will rally to the support of E. T. Mass in the hope of putting into the field a candidate who will be a contender, and a worthy one, against any nominee the republicans choose to name at the primaries.

At the suggestion of the flaw-pickering Enterprise, The Courier interviewed such well-known democrats as were listed in the attack made by the former.

Ernest T. Mass, former sheriff, and the man whose name is prominently mentioned as a successful candidate against Victor, said:

"I am not worrying about the matter in any way. I am willing to accept the nomination if my name is written in by the voters, and I am confident that Victor will not be nominated at the democratic primaries. There are enough democratic voters in the county who appreciate the situation that is presented by Victor's last-hour entrance into the race, to make his nomination an impossibility. The Enterprise absolutely did not interview me regarding my own or Victor's candidacy and had no call to list my name among those who had expressed themselves in the matter."

J. E. Jack, present county assessor, said:

"I was not interviewed by The Enterprise, and that paper had no right to list my name in its editorial as among those who would 'eat their hats' if they could force Victor's name off the primary ballot. The situation is not causing me any worry and I absolutely deny that I see in the situation anything inimical to party interests, or anything that would make me fear that Victor would be nominated. I do not believe that Victor can defeat E. T. Mass at the primaries and the majority of the democratic voters understand the situation."

"For further information The Courier can interview Joseph E. Hedges, Gilbert L. Hedges, Ernest T. Mass, J. E. Jack and a few other leaders of high standing," says the Enterprise.

Well, dear old-maidish paper, there is the "opinion" you must have received in your alleged interview with Mr. Mass and Mr. Jack.

In its clever little attempt to stir up some scandalous sort of political strife—following the methods pursued in primeval journalism—The Enterprise, with its corps of trained "interviewers" and opinion gatherers, also had an "interview" with Joseph E. Hedges.

Mr. Hedges claims no somnolent tendency nor ability, and is unable to account for his alleged statement.

"In fact," says Mr. Hedges, in a regular, daylight interview with The Courier, "I had no such interview with an Enterprise representative."

Evidently the strenuous imagination of the "mourning" Enterprise has suffered severely from its powerful elasticity. Or does it gather its "interviews" with an uncontrolled pencil? Surely some fine instrument of modern science has been employed to get from these gentlemen the "interviews" of which they have no knowledge.

Incidentally, and in the light of the facts here presented, The Courier reluctantly passes the palm as a "guardian of exaggeration," to the esteemed Enterprise, whose "strong" and "scathing" editorials are a source of rare humor.

Yea, verily! "Let the republicans rejoice," as the party's windmill says, for the remarkable "interviews" The Enterprise had with some of the democratic leaders, who talked in their sleep.

We are sorry, Mr. Mass, Mr. Jack and Mr. Hedges, that we must accuse you of these terrible things, but in the light of your "interviews" with our republican friend we must say that talking in your sleep is nearly as bad as the habit of The Enterprise in "talking through its hat."

As the grind-organ of imagination and exaggeration; as the mouthpiece of twisted fact and fancy, we pass all honors to the "mourning" Enterprise, and respectfully suggest that its "interviewers" retract their steps and get a new scent before they take up a trail as uncreditable as that which was put into type in its Sunday morning edition.

NAB WIRE THIEVES

Suitcases Full of Wire Taken by Police of Portland

The wholesale theft of copper bond wires from electric railway tracks is the charge made against C. Olinick and F. Nuremberg, arrested Wednesday morning by Special Agents Lillis, Wagner and Smith, of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company. The men were taken in custody as they stepped from an Oregon City car at Second and Alder street in Portland.

At 5 o'clock in the morning the two alleged thieves were seen to board the car at Milwaukie. They carried suitcases that sagged heavily. When the suitcases were opened after the arrest each was found to be laden with copper.

Nuremberg confessed to the special agents, it is said. During the night he and Olinick labored incessantly, he stated, ceasing only with morning. For a distance of five miles, from Sellwood to a point south of Oak Grove, they had selected and cut away the longer bond wire, the prisoner related. The tracks of the Willamette Valley Southern were similarly despoiled the night before, Nuremberg told the officers.

Several nights ago the tracks of the Southern Pacific electric line, on the West Side, were also visited by bond-wire thieves. It is thought that probable that the two prisoners are responsible for that theft as well.

Olinick served an eight months' term for the stealing of copper wire two years ago. He is now charged with larceny and also with carrying concealed weapons, as a heavy-caliber revolver was found upon him when arrested.

Sheriff Wilson, of Clackamas county, has devoted much time to the apprehension of the wire thieves and yesterday went with Nuremberg when he revealed the hiding place of much of the stolen property. A sack of wire was uncovered in a manhole on the Overlook sewer in Portland, a short distance from the home of "Patty" Maher, special P. R. L. & P. company agent.

Saturday Shopping Hints for Home Shoppers

When Oregon City people go away from home to do their shopping they are losing money. There is concrete evidence in support of that broad statement on two pages of The Courier today. Look over the offerings of the merchants of Oregon City before you even give a thought to going out of the city for anything, and we will wager that you will stay right here to do your buying. That is, of course, if you appreciate genuine bargains and dependable merchandise.

Among the advertisers this week George W. Buck & Co., have an announcement that will be interesting. Housewives and husbands may acquire a fine library table free of cost. It will pay you to read the Buck advertisement.

In the annual clean-up campaign the walls of your home should not be overlooked. Turn to Frank Busch's advertisement—wall paper at 4 cents a roll—you'll need new paper at that price.

Huntley Bros. have a great stock of Sherwin-Williams paint. There is another tip for the clean-up season. Huntley Bros. will be pleased to show you attractive color cards that the selection of the proper tints for your house may be more easily decided.

Bannon & Co. have an item that will interest the ladies. The cost of living would be less burdensome if the ladies watched such sales as this, where they can secure fine shirtwaists for $1.

L. Adams has received a large lot of sample shoes. They are good, standard footwear, but the price is so very far below normal that they will sell rapidly. This is the time to patronize such sales.

Jones Drug Co., offers "washable" paint. Notice how the ordinary paint cracks and fades after it has been washed a few times, then you will have a greater appreciation of the merits of washable paint.

Larsen & Co., buy farm produce, wool, hides and poultry for cash. If you choose you may in turn buy groceries and farm supplies from Larsen & Co., at greatly reduced prices. That is one interesting feature of the large store.

CROPS MAKING PROGRESS

Weather Is Favorable for Fall and Spring Wheat

Following is a summary of the crop conditions in Oregon for the week ending May 2, 1916, as reported to the Portland office of the Weather bureau by special correspondents throughout the state:

Mild, sunny weather prevailed during the opening and closing days of the week, while its middle portion was cool and showery, which was favorable for fall and spring-sown wheat, and they have made excellent advancement, except that cutworms have done a little damage in Morrow county.

Rye, barley, oats, alfalfa, range grass and meadows have also made excellent growth during the week, and in consequence of the improvement in pastures stock has gained rapidly in flesh.

In the dry, central counties the nights were too cool and the days too windy for crops to make as much growth as otherwise would have been the case in view of the satisfactory condition of the soil, which contains more moisture than usual at this season of the year.

In many of the western counties, especially on the low lands, the soil is still too wet to be worked, and planting has been delayed beyond the usual date. Many of the farmers in the eastern counties have finished their plowing and farm work there is well in hand. Where irrigation is necessary, the first water has been put on the land, and there is a plentiful supply for the second irrigation when it becomes necessary.

Sheep and goat shearing is progressing under satisfactory conditions and no material losses have so far occurred in consequence of cold rain or winds.

Fruit is doing nicely and there was no frost damage during the week. In the Ashland district the early and late peaches are the most promising, while the Crawfords will, at the best, produce only a light crop.

Definition of an Ohm.

An ohm, as defined by the international congress on electrical units and standards, is the resistance offered to the passage of an electric current by a column of mercury of uniform cross section having a mass of 223.0248 grains and a height of 41.8563 inches at the temperature of melting ice.

In the bureau of standards at Washington are four standard ohms so perfectly made and kept that when tested recently their average deviation from their mean value was less than 0.0001 ohm.

COUNTY SCHOOLS ABOUT TO CLOSE

club department of the county fair this fall is being prepared, and this feature of the work is getting much attention from the young club workers. The club department at the county fair is destined to be a great part of that show this fall and the county school exhibit will be placed at the state fair again as it was last year. The school officers and teachers have been working throughout the year to develop interest in the county and state fairs, and as a result the children are keenly anticipating those events.

Various projects are being undertaken in the industrial club work, and many of these have already been launched. The results of the work of the superintendent's office and the results of the interest taken in the work will be apparent in the display at the county fair in the fall.

Something progressive at all times, is the plan upon which the office has been working this year, and with that drilled into the teachers of the county it is very satisfying, according to Mr. Calavan, to learn that the great majority of the teachers in the county will renew their contracts and will remain at their posts for at least another year. The class of teachers in the county is of a high order and it will be kept so if possible by avoiding changes in the list. There are naturally a few teachers who will go elsewhere, but for the most part there will be no changes.

A very few of the short term schools in most outlying districts have closed their doors for the year. There are only a few schools in the county whose terms are less than eight months, and there are a great many which extend their training period over nine months. This results in a pretty general closing about the middle of May and from that time on until the first of June the schools about the county will close rapidly. By the latter date nearly all the schools will have stopped their work.

Immediately upon the closing of the schools the superintendent's office will redouble its efforts toward making the exhibit at the county fair a success and as soon as that is done there will be the next school year to prepare for, so that the work of the department is continuous and unrelenting in its demands.

Special emphasis has been placed this year upon the "red ink" tests outlined by Superintendent Calavan and the result of these has been the material betterment of scholastic averages throughout the county. These tests have been conducted principally in spelling and arithmetic and the children who have qualified for honors in the tests were among the most happy youngsters in their respective schools.

As a result of the arithmetic tests designed for the school children of the upper grades in the county school the following pupils, with percentage indicated, will receive attractive diplomas for their efficiency:

May Bullock, Canby, 100; Richard Nixon, Bolton, 94; Toivo Tienhaara, Meadow Brook, 90; Albert Gosenbacher, Canemah, 98; Lester Bateson, Viola, 98; Muriel Linnett, Harmony, 95; LeVon Martin, Mountain Road, 93; Bertha Boss, Lower Logan, 97; Edith Sprague, Lower Logan, 90; Eileen Nixon, Bolton, 90; Marion Barnum, Kelson, 97; Charlie Cook, Clarkes, 95; Cinda Butterfield, Liberal, 98; Gerald Ramsey, Lone Elder, 97; Elmer Olsen, Viola, 95; Marion Patterson, Willamette, 92; Norma Moulton, Kruse, 95; Adolphus Kruse, Kruse, 98; Alfred Boche, Mackburg, 94; Fred Ganshe, Mackburg, 92; Estes Ganshe, Mackburg, 98; Elsie Kolb, Mackburg, 100; Lucile Baker, Canby, 95; Bernard Reese, 99; Erwin Mackey, Sandy, 90, and Rachel Miller, Bear Creek, 94.

LARGE MINING INCREASE

Value of Gold, Silver, Copper, Lead and Zinc Nearly $30,000,000

The value of the gold, silver, copper, lead and zinc produced at mines in the Eastern or Appalachian states in 1915 was $29,968,369, against $11,437,707 in 1914, according to the statement just made public by the United States Geological Survey. The figures for 1915, compiled by James M. Hill, represent the production of 104 mines, of which 59 were gold placer mines (many of them small), 24 deep gold mines, 14 lead and zinc mines, and 7 copper mines. There was an increase in the production of gold, silver, lead and zinc in 1915, compared with 1914, but a decrease in copper.

The gold output from all mines was 10,548.09 fine ounces, valued at $224,250, an increase of 2,450.73 ounces in quantity and of $50,661 in value from 1914. The silver output, recovered in part from placers but mainly as a by-product in refining the gold and copper produced, was 102,545 fine ounces, valued at $51,987, an increase of 1,818 ounces in quantity but a decrease of $3,715 in value. Of the gold output in 1915 the placers yielded 1,163.41 ounces, against 904.56 ounces in 1914, and the gold quartz mines produced 9,384.54 ounces, against 7,165.59 ounces in 1914. The copper mines produced 335.14 ounces of gold in 1915 and 327.21 ounces in 1914. Of the 59 producing gold placers in 1915, there were 31 in Georgia, 22 in North Carolina, 2 in Alabama, and 4 in South Carolina. Siliceous ores of tailings sold or treated from Appalachian gold mines in 1915 amounted to 49,736 short tons, of which 25,910 tons was from North Carolina, 1,250 tons from Alabama, 20,052 tons from Georgia, 2,424 tons from South Carolina, and 100 tons from Virginia. The output of siliceous gold ore in 1915 was about 17,924 tons more than in 1914, and the gold from deep mines increased about 2,183.95 ounces. The average recovery of gold (including nominal recovery of silver) per ton of siliceous ores treated in the Eastern states in 1915 was $5.55. The average in Georgia was $1.29 and in North Carolina $6.65.

The copper production in 1915 was 18,772,735 pounds, valued at $3,285,229, a decrease of 782,627 pounds in quantity and an increase of $684,366 in value. Of the total output 18,046,010 pounds came from the Ducktown district of eastern Tennessee, from 623,534 short tons of pyritic copper ore treated. The remainder came chiefly from Pennsylvania, where at the Cornwall iron mines, the magnetic separation of large quantities of magnetite ore results in the recovery of copper-bearing pyrite. Vermont, Virginia and North Carolina also contributed to the copper output.

The production of lead was 697,329 pounds, valued at $32,775, an increase over the 1914 production of 443,329 pounds.

The zinc output, figured as spelter, was 312,498,575 pounds, valued at $26,374,128, an increase of 142,781,621 pounds in quantity and of $1,776,481 in value. The largest producers were the zinc mines of New Jersey, but a large and increased output also came from eastern Tennessee, western Virginia and New York.
