

The young woman told the court she had accepted Unmaga's invitation to spend the night in his house. When morning came he had hinted that he was a man of prowess.

His notebook showed that he had given Ed Hankin, a private detective, $200 to learn the art of sleuthing. He had a revolver, a knife, gum shoes and long, black mustachios.

"I'm a bad man—a tough guy, Hazel," she said he informed her.

She expressed doubt, she said, and he left the house, to reappear suddenly, covered with fresh, warm blood.

Three Times

Trembling with fear and apprehension, the young woman

AND IT IS HARD FOR ENGINEERS. ST. JEROME'S BROTHERHOOD WITH ALICE
JAMES EARL KENNEDY SPENT THE WEEK
Seattle, Wash.
crew working putting up bunkers and perform such other duties as the commander of the expedition may see fit to assign. Kennedy is well known as a first-class sailor, always ready to do his duty.