Worth $50.00 a Bottle

Wm. Barnes, San Antonio, Tex., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best cough remedy in the world. It has been worth $50.00 a bottle to me. I had the 'flu' followed by pneumonia, which left me weak, with a persistent cough. I needed rest and sleep, which I was unable to get. Some one advised Foley's Honey and Tar. I began taking it that very night. Before bed time I noticed relief, and that night had a sound sleep and perfect night's rest, the first since the beginning of the flu. I have completely recovered and do not cough at all. It cost me only $1.20 to cure that obstinate cough with Foley's Honey and Tar. Let all who read this letter try Foley's."—Jones Drug Co.

Mr. Empey's Experiences During His Seventeen Months in the First Line Trenches of the British Army in France

(Copyright, 1917, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

It was 1914, and the great world war was on, and here was I in the United States and neutral. For thirteen years I had been soldiering but had never been under fire. In my imagination I could hear the guns booming on the western front. I admit I was a trifle afraid; nevertheless I had a great desire to get into the mix-up. How could I get over? I planned out many ways, but none of them were practical.

One day while walking down Greenwich street, New York, I passed an employment agency. Staring me in the face was a great flaring sign, "Horses for France." Under this "Men Wanted." Here was my chance.

Upon returning to my office I immediately got in touch over the telephone with two prominent men in New York whom I knew to be distinctly pro-ally. After outlining my desire, an appointment was made for me to meet a certain gentleman at the Hotel Astor at four o'clock that afternoon. I met him. He introduced me to a Frenchman. At that time in my eyes a Frenchman was a hero, a man to be looked up to, a man fighting in the Great Cause. But now a Frenchman to me is more than a hero. After being introduced I went up into the Frenchman's room and talked over the matter of horses for France for about twenty minutes.

Upon leaving the Frenchman I was told to report to him three days later, at the same time and place. I left, bubbling over with enthusiasm and anticipation.

During this interval of three days I mapped out a story of my life to present to him upon our second interview. The eventful day at last came, and once more I was closeted with him. I started to tell him my story. He interrupted me by waving his right hand to the right and left. It reminded me of the butts on a target range during rifle practice, when the man marking the target wigwags a miss to the firing line. My heart sank. Then he spoke, and I was carried from despondency to the greatest height of expectation. His words: "Pardon me, monsieur, I already know your life," and in an amazingly short time he told me more than I knew about myself. I had been carefully investigated.

My instructions received from him are confidential, so I will not go into them. Anyway, he handed me an envelope and told me to follow out carefully all details as contained therein.

I immediately went back to my office, opened the envelope and on a typewritten sheet I read: "Report at Goldsmith's Employment agency, No. —— Greenwich street. Ship as an ordinary horseman and during voyage carefully follow the verbal instructions received by you during our interview, making careful note of all details immediately after happening. Be cautious in doing this. Upon landing in France report to the prefecture of police, Bordeaux, and to the letter obey his instructions. Good luck."

I went home and put on my oldest clothes—an old black suit, olive drab shirt, a pair of heavy army shoes and a woolen cap. I had let my beard grow and certainly looked rough.

In passing through City Hall park, New York, one sees many derelicts of the human race sitting on the benches. I sat down between two of these wrecks of humanity and engaged them in conversation, trying to blend into their atmosphere. About ten minutes later a policeman came past and told the three of us to move on. I slouched away with the other two. Telling them that I was going out "panhandling," I took my leave, but not before one of them made an appealing and successful touch for a nickel. The method used by him in securing that nickel would have done credit to the greatest financiers in the country in putting through a deal involving millions.

Going down Greenwich street, slouching along, looking at the ground, I ran plump into a young lady of my acquaintance. I had a feeling of affection for this particular young lady, but it soon died out upon hearing her remark as I collided with her, "If you cannot look where you are going, I will have you arrested." Of course, she did not recognize me and I took no pains to argue the matter with her. I was glad enough to slink by.

When I came to the agency there was a long line of bums, two and three deep, trying to ship as horsemen for France.

It would be impossible to get a rougher and more unkempt gathering of men. It looked as if some huge giant had taken a fine comb and carefully combed the gutters of New York.

I fell into this line and waited my turn. Upon arriving at the desk, in front of me sat a little fat, greasy Jew. To describe his manner of handling the men as being impolite would be a great exaggeration. The way he handled that line of human cattle would do the kaiser's heart good.

It came my turn, and this conversation ensued:

"What do you know about horses?"

I answered: "Six years in the United States cavalry."

The Agent: "What regiments?"

"Eleventh and Twelfth."

"You're a liar. You never saw the cavalry."

I felt like punching him on the nose but did not do so. I wanted to ship as a horseman. I showed him my discharges. He said: "They're faked. What did you do, desert or were you kicked out?"

I was getting sore and answered: "Deserted the Twelfth; kicked out of the Eleventh."

"What's your name?"

"Arthur Guy Empey."

"You're a German."

This was too much even for me, and I answered: "You're a damned liar." I saw my chances of shipping vanishing in smoke.

The Jew grinned and rubbed his hands and said: "You're all right. Go into that room and get a card made out, and come back at two o'clock."

I received a card and went to a beanery across the street and had a wonderful meal of corned beef hash, muddy coffee and huge slices of bread, minus butter. This cost me fifteen cents.

At two o'clock I reported back, and with seventy-two others was herded like cattle, and in a long, straggling line, flanked by three of the employees of the agency, we marched to the ferry and landed "somewhere in New Jersey."

The ship, a huge three-stacker, was lying alongside. We were shoved into single file, ready to go up the gangplank. Then our real examination took place. At the foot of the gangplank were a group of men around a long table. They certainly put us through a third degree to find out if there was any German blood in us. Several men were turned down. Luckily, I got through and signed for the voyage, and went on board.

At the head of the gangplank stood the toughest specimen of humanity I have ever seen. He looked like a huge gorilla, and had a big, crescent-shaped, livid scar running from his left ear under his chin up to his right eye. Every time he spoke the edges of the scar seemed to grow white. His nose was broken and he had huge, shaggy eyebrows. His hand was resting on the rail of the ship. It looked like a ham, and inwardly I figured out what would happen to me if that ham-like fist ever came in contact with the point of my jaw. As we passed him he showered us with a few complimentary remarks, such as "Of all the lousy scum I have seen, this bunch of lubbers is the worst, and this is what they give me to take thirteen hundred horses over to Bordeaux." Later on I found this individual was foreman of the horse gang.

We were ordered aft and sat on the after hatch. The fellow on my right was a huge, blue-gummed negro. He was continually scratching himself. I unconsciously eased away from him and bumped into the fellow sitting on my left. After a good look at him I eased back again in the direction of the negro. I don't think that he had taken a bath since escaping from the cradle. Right then my uppermost thought was how I could duck this trip to France. The general conversation among the horse gang was: "When do we eat?"

We must have sat there about twenty minutes, when the second foreman came aft. I took fifteen guesses at his nationality, and at last came to the conclusion that he was a cross between a Chinaman and a Mexican. He was thin, about six feet tall, and wore a huge sombrero. His skin was tanned the color of leather. Every time he smiled I had the impression that the next minute he would plant a stiletto in my back. His name was Pinero. His introduction to us was very brief: "Get up off of that blankety blank hatch and line up against the rail." We did as ordered. Then he commanded: "All the niggers line up alongside of the port rail." I guess a lot of them did not know what he meant by the "port rail" because they looked very much bewildered. With an oath he snapped out. "You blankety blank idiots. The port rail is that rail over there. Come on. Move or I'll soon move you." He looked well able to do this and the niggers promptly shuffled over to the place designated. He quickly divided us into squads of twelve men, then ordered: "All of you who are deserters from the army or who have seen service in the cavalry step out in front." Four others besides myself stepped out. The first man he came to he informed: "You're a straw boss. Do you know what a straw boss is?" This man meekly answered. "No, sir." With another oath, the second foreman said: "All right, you're not a straw boss; fall back." I got the cue immediately. My turn came next.

"Do you know what a straw boss is?"

I said: "Sure."

He said: "All right, you're a straw boss."

I had not the least idea of what he was talking about, but made up my mind that it would not take me long to find out. Then he passed down the line, picking out straw bosses. I asked one of the men in my gang what were the duties of a straw boss. He had been over with horses before, and told me that a straw boss meant to be in charge of the gang to feed the horses and to draw and keep careful check on the straw, hay, oats and bran. Having served in the cavalry, this job, as I figured, would be regular pie for me.

In about an hour and a half's time Pinero had selected his straw bosses and divided the men into gangs, and assigned us to our quarters on the ship. These quarters were between decks and very much crowded; the stench was awful. Iron bunks, three deep, with filthy and lousy mattresses on them, were set into the sides of the ship. The atmosphere in that dirty hole turned my stomach and I was longing for the fresh air of the deck. A dirty bum, with tobacco running out of the corner of his mouth, turned to me and asked: "Do the graybacks bother you much, matey?" A shudder ran through me as I answered: "Not much." But I figured out that as soon as I got them, which I knew would occur in a very short time, they certainly would bother me, but I had to keep a stiff upper lip if I wanted to retain their respect and my authority as a straw boss.

THE MARKETS

Monday's receipts at the Portland Union Stock Yards company brought a total of 114 cars, giving the buyers an opportunity to bid on an excellent shipment.

The cattle receipts amounted to 1470 head and the market opened with a good demand and prices holding their own with no marked changes. Prime steers were quoted at $13.00-$14.00; with a good demand; good to choice steers $11.50-$12.50; medium to good steers $10.50-$11.50; fair to good steers, $9.50-$10.50; common to fair steers, $8.00-$9.00; choice cows and heifers, $7.00-$8.00; good to choice cows and heifers, $10.00-$11.00; medium to good cows and heifers, $8.75-$9.75; fair to medium cows and heifers, $7.00-$8.00; canners, $3.50-$5.00; bulls, $6.50-$9.00; calves, $9.00-$13.50.

A good supply of hogs were on the market today, receipts amounting to 4800, but as a lot they were not of as good quality as reached here last week when the hog market was

County Farm Bureau Wins

County farm bureau and county agricultural agent work received a tremendous impetus in Oregon last year from war necessities for increased production and conservation, according to the annual report of Paul V. Maris, state leader of county agent work. The work has had the hearty cooperation of the federal food administration, state council of defense, granges, farmers unions, officers and teachers of the public schools, and other organizations working in the cause of national defense. The county agent is the representative of the United States department of agriculture, the State Agricultural college and the people of the county. The agents and farm bureaus directed the campaigns for increased food production in the several counties, made surveys of seed stocks and labor needs, and organized defensive measures against rodents and other crop pests.

Rural Carrier Examination

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for the county of Marion, Ore., to be held at Oregon City on February 8, 1919, to fill the position of rural carrier at Aurora and vacancies that may later occur on rural routes from other post offices in the above-mentioned county. The examination will be open only to male citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory of a post office in the county and who meet the other requirements set forth in Form No. 1977. This form and application blanks may be obtained from the offices mentioned above or from the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C. Applications should be forwarded to the Commission at Washington at the earliest practicable date.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.
