Worth $50.00 a Bottle

Wm. Barnes, San Antonio, Tex., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best cough remedy in the world. It has been worth $50.00 a bottle to me. I had the flu followed by pneumonia, which left me weak, with a persistent cough. I needed rest and sleep, which I was unable to get. Some one advised Foley's Honey and Tar. I began taking it that very night. Before bed time I noticed relief, and that night had a sound sleep and perfect night's rest, the first since the beginning of the flu. I have completely recovered and do not cough at all. It cost me only $1.20 to cure that obstinate cough with Foley's Honey and Tar. Let all who read this letter try Foley's."—Jones Drug Co.

"Somewhere in France"

with Arthur Guy Empey Author of "OVER THE TOP"

—One fellow in my gang was a trouble maker. He must have been about forty years old and looked as hard as nails. He was having an argument with a pasty-faced looking specimen of humanity, about twenty-six years old. To me this man appeared to be in the last stages of consumption. I told the old fellow to cut out his argument and leave the other fellow alone. Upon hearing this he squirted a well-directed stream of tobacco juice through his front teeth, which landed on my shoe. I inwardly admired and respected his accuracy. I saw my authority waning and knew that I would have to answer this insult quickly. I took two or three quick steps forward and swung on his jaw with my fist. His head went up against the iron bunk with a sickening sound and he crumpled up and fell on the deck, the blood pouring from the cut in his head. I felt sick and faint thinking that he had been killed, but it would not do to show these signs of weakness on my part, so without even moving toward him I ordered one of the men to look him over and see if he was all right. He soon came around. From that time on he was the most faithful man in the section and greatly respected me. The rest of the men growled and mumbled and I thought I was in for a terrible beating. Lying close at hand was an iron spike about eighteen inches long. Grasping this, I turned to the rest, trying to be as tough as I possibly could:

"If any of the rest of you bums think they are boss around here, start something, and I will sink this into his head." Although I was quailing underneath, still I got away with it, and from that time on I was boss of my section.

Now every man was smoking or chewing tobacco. Pretty soon the hold became thick with smoke, and I was gasping for breath, when the voice of the foreman came down the companionway:

"Turn out on deck and give a hand loading the horses. Look alive or I'll come down there and rouse you out pretty quick."

We needed no second invitation and lined up on the deck. I looked over the rail. On the dock were hundreds of the sorriest looking specimens of horse flesh I have ever laid eyes on. These horses were in groups of ten or twelve, being held by horsemen from the New Jersey stockyards. A lot of the men who had shipped as horsemen had never led a horse in their life, and it was pitiful to see their fear.

The foreman let out a volley of oaths for them to move quickly, and they decided to accept the lesser evil and take a chance with the horses.

Then the work of loading commenced. I have been in a cavalry regiment when hurry-up orders were received to entrain for the Mexican border and helped to load eleven hundred horses on trains. The confusion on that dock was indescribable. The horses were loaded by three runways. My gang and I were detailed on the after runway. The foreman was leaning over the rail, glaring down upon us and now and then giving instructions mixed with horrible oaths. He had a huge marlin'spike in his hand. On the dock was the second foreman, in his large sombrero, a red neckerchief around his neck, wearing a blue shirt with the sleeves rolled up to the elbows, and in his right hand a coiled lariat. It did one's heart good to see him rope the horses which broke loose. Upon watching his first performance I knew I was correct when I figured him as having Mexican blood in his veins.

A bleary-eyed drunk was trying to lead a horse by the halter up our run. He was looking back at the horse, at the same time tugging and jerking on the halter. You could see the white in the horse's eyes, and I knew right away, from my experience with horses, that this was a bad one, or, as we would term him in the cavalry, an "outlaw." The drunk was cursing and swearing and kicking up at the horse's head. The foreman saw this and directed his barrage at the offender.

"How in h— do you expect to lead a horse while looking at him? Turn your back to him, you lousy bum. You are blocking the whole run. Turn your back to him, I say. You can't lead him that way. If I come down there to you, I'll soon show you how to get him aboard."

The bleary-eyed one became bewildered and in his excitement lost his footing on the slippery runway and fell underneath the horse, at the same time loosening his hold on the halter chain. The horse jerked his head loose, reared up, turned around and made a break for the dock. The man on the gangway tried to scramble out of the way. The horse, in wheeling, let fly with both heels and caught him below the right ear with his near hind foot. With a piercing shriek the drunk clasped both hands to his head, fell over backward and rolled down to the foot of the gang-plank, and lay there in a crumpled heap, the blood pouring from his nose, mouth and the wound below his ear.

Upon hearing this shriek several of the men leading their horses, in their fright turned them loose, and there was a mad stampede on the dock.

The pasty-faced horseman, whom I had helped out a little while before in the argument about his bunk was standing near the runway, holding on to a horse. He turned his horse loose and rushed to the bloody mass, which was twitching with convulsive shudders. The foreman, on seeing this accident, snapped out a long string of curses, which almost froze my heart.

"What did I tell you? Didn't I tell you not to look at him? I knew you would get it, and a damned good job, too; blocking that run with your fool tricks."

Then he noticed the pasty-faced horseman stooping over the bleeding man.

"Get 'im by the heels, you cross between a corpse and monkey, and drag him out of the way. We've bloody well got to get this ship loaded to catch the tide."

The pale-faced man kept on with his examination without paying any attention to the foreman's instructions. The foreman got blue in the face and bubbled over with rage.

"Do you hear what I tell you? Get 'im out of the way. This ship has got to be loaded or I'll go down there and pound some obedience into you."

The man still paid no attention. The foreman was speechless. In a few seconds the stooping man straightened up, and looking the foreman straight in the eye, calmly replied: "He's dead." This did not seem to faze the foreman in the least and he belted out: "How do you know he's dead?" The man answered simply: "I'm a doctor." Then the foreman once again exploded: "A doctor! Blawst my deathlights, a doctor! Well, if you're a doctor, what in h— are you doing on a horse ship? You ought to be rolling pills for the highbrows."

The doctor never took his piercing look from the eye of the foreman. The foreman was now like an enraged bull. Spitting all over himself, he blustered out: "Well, if he's dead, there is no doctor that can do him any good. A couple of you black skunks over there (addressing two negroes who were almost blanched to a bluish white and who were trembling near by), get ahead of him and drag 'im out of the way." One of the negroes, with a leering grin, replied: "I shipped on this horse ship to handle horses, and I don't allow nobody that it's my work to tote corpses around."

Just then the second foreman rushed over, gave the negro a push out of the way, and, grabbing the heels of the dead man, pulled him away from the run. I turned away, sickened with disgust. The foreman then took an empty oat sack and spread it over the bloody head.

Just then the clanging bell of an ambulance was heard and a white-clothed doctor, followed by two men with a stretcher, pushed their way through the crowd of horses and horsemen. They were accompanied by a policeman. The body was put into the ambulance and taken away, while the police-officer went on board the ship.

The pasty-faced doctor was holding onto the rail of the runway and coughing. I thought each gasp would be his last. The second foreman was talking to him. The doctor paid no attention. Going up behind the doctor, the foreman coolly measured his distance and swung on the point of his jaw. The doctor crumpled up and fell on the dock. At this cowardly and dastardly act, I saw red and made a leap at the foreman. An onrushing light flashed in front of me and a huge locomotive, going 60 miles an hour, hit me between the eyes; then blackness. When I came to, I was lying in my bunk in the hold. I had an awful headache. Then everything came back to me with a flash. I could hear the gurgling of water on the ship's side and knew we were under way. Right then and there I decided never again, especially while aboard ship, to interfere with the foreman. Among that gang of human wrecks and cut-throats it was every man for himself, and the survival of the fittest. I had two beautiful black eyes, and my nose felt like a football.

I went up on deck. The moon and stars were out and the twinkling lights of New York harbor were gradually fading into the distance. Leaning over the rail were the foreman and the veterinarian, "Doc" Casey, by name. The foreman was talking. Snatches of his conversation reached my ears: "Load horses? Why, that bunch of scum they wished on me couldn't load lump sugar, one lump at a time. How Brown expects me to deliver 1,200 horses into Bordeaux with this scurvy outfit, I don't know. We're lucky, I'm thinkin', if five hundred o' them don't die. Why, there's not one o' the blighters knows which end of a horse eats hay. I tell you, Doc, your work is cut out for you. If, in a few days, you don't have a couple of hundred cases of colic on your hands, then I'm a bloun' liar."

"Doc" Casey answered:

"Well, I'll tell you, Mr. Goorty, this is my third trip over and I have seen some tough bunches, but this one is the limit, and I sure have a job on my hands. It's too bad that Pinero let out on that young fellow, because, in my mind, that was a pretty cowardly blow. He seemed to know how to handle horses. What do you say if I give him the job of assistant veterinarian? He's had six years' cavalry experience."

The foreman answered: "Throw him over the side, if you want—I don't care. But I guess you'll need someone to help you out, so go to it."

I was overjoyed. Just then Pinero came aft. The horse doctor turned to him and said: "Look here, Pinero, I've seen lots of dirty work in my life, but that exhibition of yours on the dock is about the filthiest I've seen in a long time. Now, just take a tip from me. That young fellow from now on is working for me, and you lay your hands off of him. If I find you meddling with him, I'll push that silly grin of yours down your throat until it chokes you. Now, that's all I got to say, lay off of him. Do you understand?"

Pinero started to mumble excuses, but the doctor shut him up with, "I don't want to hear any more. I'm off o' you for life, but remember what I tell you. Steer clear from the two o' us, sabe?"

I guess the second foreman "sabled" all right, because he vouchsafed no answer. My heart warmed to "Doc" Casey and I slipped away unobserved.
