

About the State

Resume of the News of the Week from All Parts of Oregon

"The entire citizenship of The Dalles, in mass convention, pledge to you our unqualified support, and express our confidence in your ability to protect the honor and dignity of the nation." That message went over the wires between The Dalles and Washington, D. C., last week following the greatest patriotic demonstration in the history of the city. It was directed to Woodrow Wilson, was signed by Mayor J. E. Anderson and meant just what it said—that the entire citizenship of The Dalles supports President Wilson in these perilous times and is confident he will uphold the honor and dignity of the United States.

Probably the only railroad rural route in the world has been established at Cottage Grove. Robert Jones, who has the route up Row river, recently decided that it would be easier to run a gasoline car on the tracks of the Oregon Pacific & Eastern railway than to run an automobile on the Row river road. As the railroad and wagon road parallel each other the postoffice department offered no objection and the change went into effect April 1. It is understood that the larger number of patrons are greatly pleased with the change and that those who pay road taxes are glad to have the road-destroying automobile removed.

To arrange for a much larger bean acreage in Lane county, C. E. Patterson, who has charge of the marketing department of the Oregon Fruit company, is at Eugene. Mr. Patterson expects to secure the promise to plant 800 acres of beans in Lane county this year exclusively for his company, as has been done in Marion county. The company will install bean graders and polishers to prepare the beans so that they will be attractive to the buyers and compete with the California product.

Seventeen bricks of virgin gold, of a total weight of 1,221 ounces, and valued at $23,199, said to be the largest single clean-up ever brought from a southern Oregon mine, were brought to Grants Pass last week by James Logan from the Simmons-Logan placer mine at Waldo. This great mass of gold was the return from a run of 70 days at the mine. It was not, however, all the gold in the sluice boxes, as the boxes were not cleaned as they are at the finish of the season's run, and hundreds of dollars worth of the yellow metal was left in the boxes to be taken out later.

Oregon will witness a tremendous landslide in favor of the $6,000,000 good roads bonding bill next June 4—the state will go ten to one in favor of the bonds—provided other sections vote as Forest Grove voted after listening to a red hot debate between the champions of the bill and Grange Master C. E. Spence, the chief opponent, says the News-Times. The debate was held on Tuesday evening, following a banquet under the auspices of the Forest Grove Commercial club. The affair was largely attended, in fact all were not able to get places in the dining room. Many women were present.

The annual Washington County Christian Endeavor convention will be held in Hillsboro Saturday and Sunday, April 14 and 15. Hillsboro extends a hearty welcome to all the Endeavorers of the county and will entertain them royally while there. A number of the strongest Christian leaders of the state will appear on the program, among whom are Dr. W. P. White of Albany; Barclay Aheson, service secretary of the Portland Y. M. C. A.; G. Evert Baker and Lloyd Carrick, two ex-presidents, and Rev. Harold Griffiths, pastor of the First Congregational church of Portland.

A crew of 10 men has gone to the Pelikea mine on Sixes river in northern Curry county to begin operations for the summer. The men will cut 200,000 feet of lumber with which to construct a 30-inch wooden pipe line for a distance of two and one-half miles. During the summer months the flow of the river is to be diverted through this pipe and the power developed will be utilized in mining the bed of the river for gold and platinum. A sawmill is on the ground and a planer is being shipped there from Bandon.

The unmelting snow of the winter in the foothills about Gold Hill is a boon to the placer miners on the creeks. Much placer gold will be recovered this spring and most of the miners are using all the available water to clean up the bed rock on piped and broken ground which has not been cleaned up for three years, due to insufficient water.

Polk county is plowing up its hop yards and independence has seen its last "big hop-pickin' time." The hop is giving way to the sugar beet. Among the well-known hop growers who will plant sugar beets are Hanna Bros., Sloper Bros., H. Laliberte, Adam Green, J. E. Hubbard, L. Damon, Davidson & Hedges, R. T. McCarthy, Thomas Pennell, Seid Back, W. F. Fletcher, H. Mattison, Orville Butler, Walker Bros., Sloper & Patton, A. M. McLaughlin, G. A. McLaughlin and Julius Pincus, a number of them abandoning hops altogether. A decrease of at least 1500 in the acreage of hops can be safely estimated in the Independence district this year, and 1000 acres of this land will be used for beets.

Mrs. Joel Shaw of Polk county has 70 barred Plymouth Rock hens, from which she received 1665 eggs during the month of March. This is an average of 23 eggs to the hen. This is a record yet unparalleled in the county.

The good weather of the past week has been of great benefit to the sheep men of Morrow county. Lambing is in full blast and all flockmasters report that they are saving 100 per cent.

Without a dissenting vote the 40 members of the O. A. C. cadet band decided to enter the federal service in a body whenever volunteers are called for. Captain H. L. Beard, director of the band and instructor in the college, stated that when the band goes he will go with it.

Gus Melhase of Klamath Falls has offered to plant a large acreage of potatoes for the U. S. army, or as the government may see fit to use them. Mr. Melhase will give the government half the production provided the government will furnish the seed potatoes, and he has a large tract of land which he will devote to this purpose.

The Heppner Farmers' Union at a meeting held last Saturday decided to erect an elevator of 100,000 bushels capacity, to be built of wood. The funds are already subscribed and the estimated cost is $18,000.

Though crippled as a result of a recent accident so that he could hardly walk, S. H. Elliott hobbled from his store in Lebanon Sunday night and with an unloaded rifle held up a Bulgarian who had torn down an American flag in front of his store. The theft of the flag rather than any act of disloyalty appears to have been the motive of the Bulgarian, whose name is Mike Nicoloff, but the matter is being investigated by officers.

Twenty-one marriage licenses were issued by W. A. Cadwell, deputy in the office of County Clerk Beveridge of Multnomah county, on Monday. One week ago, before war plans including the compulsory military service of all youths between the ages of 18 and 25 had been broached, the licenses issued on Monday numbered six. Twelve of the licenses issued Monday were to youths of compulsory military age. Three of these were to boys less than 21.

DIVORCES ASKED

Groom of Two Months Wants to Quit. Mrs. Talbert Sues

The married life of Emmor J. and Ester Hoover was brief and highly unpleasant, according to the divorce complaint filed in Judge Campbell's court here Tuesday. The couple was married at Portland on February 14, last, and in less than two months are in the courts asking separation. The allegation is cruelty and Mr. Hoover charges his wife with having an ungovernable temper.

Desertion is the allegation in the divorce complaint filed by Marguerite Talbert against Frank Talbert, to whom she was married at Clackamas. She asks the custody of a 7-year-old child, Celia, and $15 a month alimony. Samuel E. Lowe, who married Jennie E. Lowe at Lewisville, Mont., on March 6, 1899, seeks a divorce through a complaint filed Monday in which the allegation is desertion. The couple has one child, aged 14.

Cramps!

Says Mrs. Frank Hagler, of Carbondale, Ill.: "I was suffering terrible cramps and pains each month. I had used... but it didn't give any permanent relief. The pains came back on me just the same as before... After taking Cardui... I was entirely relieved from the pains, and have never been bothered with them since."

A TOURING EPISODE

By PAULINE D. EDWARDS

My dear Belle, I have had an adventure, and I must tell you all about it. As soon as the spring opened I became wild to go on an auto tour with our new machine, that is admirably fitted for long trips, having a rack in the rear large enough to carry a Saratoga trunk. Of course I couldn't tour alone with a girl friend. Mamma would not hear of that, and there was nothing for it but she must go with me herself.

We started when the leaves on the trees were well grown, with excellent road maps, and by supplementing the information they gave us at every fork in the road we got on very well. One evening we were nearing a place called Huntingdale, which seemed to be rather a collection of summer cottages than anything else, and we did not have the name of any hotel at which to stop. Passing an apothecary who had alighted to examine his engine, I asked him if he could direct us to a public house where we could spend the night. He looked up at me, and our eyes met.

Did you ever look into the eyes of a man for the first time and recognize through them a soul that was in harmony with yours? This I did when I met the gaze of this man. Not only that; I knew he saw in me what I had found in him.

"I am sorry to say," he replied to my question, "that there is no hotel in Huntingdale. You'll not find one that you would care to stop at till you reach Astoria, twelve miles beyond."

I looked disappointed. Mamma was getting tired, and before we could make the twelve miles it would be dark, and we made it a rule to travel only by daylight.

"I can direct you," continued the young man, "to a private family hotel, but they are not taking boarders there this year except myself. However, if you care to try I think you can get in for one night."

We said we would certainly care to try, and the young man, pulling down the hood of his auto and cranking it, got into his machine and led the way to an attractive looking house on an eminence. When we reached it he asked us to remain in our car till he stated our case for us. We thanked him, and he went inside. In a few minutes he returned and said that he had fixed the matter for us satisfactorily. The landlady was confined to her room, but he was very much at home there himself and would see that we were made comfortable. He handed us out of our car, and after our trunk had been removed and our machine started for the garage we went up into the house.

I wondered that so luxurious an abode should be used for boarders. Hotels and boarding houses be they ever so well furnished are bound to show some wear.

Mamma thought she was too tired to dress for dinner but I told her in such a place it would not be safe to dine in traveling costume, so we both put on evening dress. On entering the dining room we saw that places had been set for three, and the only person in the room besides ourselves was the young man who had been our conductor. Seeing that he was in evening dress I was very thankful that mamma and I had decided to change our costumes.

"Our landlady," he said, "has commissioned me to take her place at table and do the honors in her stead. I presume I shall have to introduce myself, having no one to introduce me. I am Edgar Sterling, at your service." Mamma introduced herself and then introduced me, after which a waiter who seemed rather a butler than a waiter served us, and we had a delicious dinner. Wine was opened without our having ordered it. Both mamma and I declined it when the waiter was about to pour it into our glasses, whereupon Mr. Sterling said: "The terms in this house include wine, so you are not under any obligation to me."

We permitted the waiter to fill our glasses, but since the wine served was champagne we concluded that the bill for our one night's stay would be something frightful. But I had fallen under a spell induced by the devotion of Mr. Sterling, expressed in his eyes, a pleasing smile he had and his constant attention to my every wish.

After dinner mamma remained below but half an hour, when she went upstairs to bed. I passed the most delightful evening of my life, and mamma was obliged to call me several times before I could tear myself away from my entertainer.

The next morning we breakfasted alone, the waiter having informed us that Mr. Sterling had gone out early in his car. We asked for our bill, but were told that the landlady was not in a condition to make it up and if we would leave our address a statement would be sent us when she recovered. Upon our return home we expected to find our hotel bill. We were still expecting to find it when one evening Mr. Sterling called and put a new face on the matter. He confessed that he had taken us to his own residence, that the landlady was a myth and that the waiter was his butler. He apologized for his deception by saying that it had occurred to him to take this course rather than attempt to force before us the hospitality of a stranger.

Now, wasn't that just too delightful an episode to keep?

From Mr. Sterling's attention to me I expect soon to tell you of another episode.

CATTLE LOANS POPULAR

Farmers of Responsibility May Apply for Federal Money as Investment

Since the passage of the federal reserve act admitting cattle loans maturing in six months or less to rediscout by member banks this form of investment has become more popular. Cattle loans are a growth of recent years brought about by natural conditions. Ten years ago we were exporting $15,000,000 worth of beef annually. Then beets were fed on the open ranges of the west; today they are fed in fenced and cultivated areas with a great deal of the uncertainty incidental to the former method of production removed. With Mexico believed to be stripped of beef and other conditions giving prospect of high prices and steady demand, the Bankers' magazine calls attention to the attractiveness of cattle loans as a form of investment. Such loans are divided into three classes, live beef or feeder loans, stocker and dairy loans.

Live beef loans are usually made to responsible persons for the purchase of beets for fattening. A farmer of known experience and ability with the necessary facilities can apply for a loan with which to buy steers for stocking his place. The banker, if unacquainted with the applicant, makes a personal investigation regarding his responsibility and equipment and if these are found to be satisfactory advances the money, taking a chattel mortgage on the stock and usually on the feed as well. The element of risk is small because of the rapid increase in the value of the stock after fattening. In addition, the loans, because they are paid at the time the stock is sold, are usually of short duration and readily negotiable.

Stocker loans are ordinarily made for the purchase of stock cattle, to be kept on farms for breeding purposes. They are usually of longer duration than the feeder loans because a longer period intervenes before the borrower can "cash in." Consequently they are less desirable where quick convertibility is essential. But the risk is small, and the rate, from the view of the investor, compensatory.

Dairy loans are made for the buying of milk cows and are presumably to be repaid from the sale of butter fat. They are made for longer terms ordinarily than either of the other classes of loans. For the local banker, who is familiar with conditions and can watch his investment they are safe, but not so desirable for investment by outsiders.

The provision of the federal reserve act admitting the loans maturing in six months or less to rediscout has tended greatly to standardize the cattle loan business. Loans are made either through the local banks or through the specially organized cattle loan companies which have been formed in recent years. If made through the local banker the borrower makes a property statement and executes a note and chattel mortgage to the banker, who verifies the statements and may hold the note as reserve or, if a federal reserve member, submit it for rediscout. The large cattle loan companies deal mostly with large producers of well known responsibility and market the loans through their sales organizations with the city bank.

Legislation of the last few years gives the farmer an advantage which should eventually be reflected in lower prices for his product. A responsible farmer does not need any longer to limit his operations for lack of money. By taking advantage of his opportunities he should be able to increase his product and conduct his business on more modern and scientific lines through the purchase of equipment made possible by his ability to command ready money.

PREACHING GOLDEN RULE

War, Laws and Individuals are Themes for Mrs. Burr

Clackamas, Rt. 1, April 9, 1917.

To the editor: When any nation goes to war with another nation there must be some foundation for war, something to be gained, something that one nation demands of another. Now, what does the United States ask of Germany and what does Germany ask of the United States. If war is caused through business methods we have a right to know what the business is—what our nation asks for and what Germany asks for. If a body of men make a law, each of these men are to be subject to their own law that they make in a body or as a whole. That is, if you make a law for your fellow man, you are to be subject to the same law. The golden rule has been given to man as a guide to help make good laws.

Do unto others as you would have them do by you is a good rule for every one to follow—whether you are making laws for your own home, whether you are dealing with your fellow man or whether you are dealing with a foreign power. Law, like an endless chain, will in time drag man down into the law he creates. It is hard for the human race to get out of that old rut where brute force rules. Man always thinks it is going to be the other fellow, forgetting that some day it may be himself. It is better to make laws where all may live and enjoy life and no man be punished or prosecuted except when he willfully does that which injures or harms his fellow man. And remember, while it may be the other fellow now, some day you, too, may be the other fellow, and do by your fellow man as you would have your fellow man do by you, whatever your business may be, whether dealing with home, with our own nation, or a foreign nation. If man as a whole or in a body do that which injures a fellow man or woman, know that each individually would be subject to the same law, I am sure every one would be more careful how they deal with each individual case when law is created and put in force.

MRS. VIOLA BURR.

VALUE

For our due in dollars, the customer receives his due in clothing. No disparity between the two. Both equal. Both alike.

That, in a few words, is our conception of clothing value. All noisy claims to the contrary, it isn't necessary to excel the American dollar in value to achieve retail distinction. An honest merchant knows he does a rare thing when he equals it.

A dollar must be as good on the inside as it is on the outside. So must be the suit.

As it seems to us, there is just as much wrong in giving a counterfeit suit for a good dollar as it is to get a good suit for a counterfeit dollar.

Our clothing comes from such concerns as A. B. Kirschbaum Company, who would no more think of putting a cheating makeshift into a garment than Uncle Sam would of putting lead into a silver dollar.

The new Spring models now here for your choosing at $15, $20, $25, $30, and $35
