ORCHARD PLANTING.

Proper Distances Apart at Which to Set Various Fruit Trees.

The proper planting distance at which to set fruit trees needs careful attention. Prominent growers set peach trees at least twenty feet apart. Although some set the trees sixteen to eighteen feet apart, this has proved too close. Peach trees set at this distance cannot secure sufficient light, plant food and moisture to develop properly and a good cover crop cannot be grown under these conditions.

Large growing varieties of apples, such as Baldwin, Stayman and Gravenstein, are at the maximum distance of forty feet apart. In certain sections where these varieties grow smaller, because of soil conditions, thirty-six feet is sufficient. Varieties of medium size, such as Rome, McIntosh and Twenty Ounce, do best when set thirty-six feet apart. For the smaller growing and upright varieties, such as Wealthy, Duchess and Yellow Transparent, thirty to thirty-two feet is suitable. Where fillers are placed between permanent trees the latter are set forty feet apart. Plums are set at a distance of twenty feet apart, pears twenty, sour cherries twenty to twenty-five and sweet cherries thirty to thirty-five feet.

HANDLING INCUBATORS TO GET GOOD RESULTS

If spring "fries" and fall eggs are desired the incubator should be set the first or second week in February, giving a hatch the early part of March, according to T. S. Townsend, instructor in poultry husbandry in Kansas Agricultural college.

The main purposes of an early hatch is to allow the pullets ample time to mature before cold weather. If they do not do this they will not lay until the following spring. Cockerels hatched in March will be ready to sell when the market for frites is good. The early hatched chicks will be large enough to be turned out on the ground by the time grass and other plants have started to grow and will thus get the advantage of the green feed.

Before starting the incubator it is advisable to spray the machine thor-

The Rhode Island Reds have yellow skins, their bones are well covered with meat, and they have a round and handsome appearance when dressed. Rhode Island Red hens are excellent sitters, make the best of mothers and bring the chickens along quickly and manufacture good broilers early. The Reds are very active and are great "rustlers," but they are not wild, and a four foot fence will hold them. The bird pictured is a Single Comb Rhode Island Red cock.

oughly with a 2 per cent solution of coal tar disinfectant. This will kill any germs or spores that may have lived through the winter. The incubator should be kept in a warm room, preferably a cellar, in order that outside weather conditions will not cause the temperature of the machine to drop to a dangerous point.

The incubator should be run two or three days to test the temperature before the eggs are put in. The machine should be kept at a temperature of 101 degrees the first week, 102 degrees the second week and 103 degrees the third week. The thermometer should be kept on a level with the top of the eggs.

The lamp should be filled and the wick carefully trimmed each day. The eggs should be turned and cooled before taking care of the lamp, because if there is any grease or oil on the hands when the eggs are handled it will injure the hatching qualities of the eggs. They should be turned every day for the first eighteen days. It is a good plan to move the eggs at the outside of the tray to the inside to overcome any difference in temperature. Beginning with the third day the eggs should be cooled each time they are turned.

Care of the Bull Calf.

At the age of five to six months the bull calf must be separated from the other calves. From this time on he must receive regular exercise and be gently handled. When he is ten to twelve months of age he may be given light service, possibly one cow every three or four weeks. From the age of twelve to sixteen months this service may be increased to one cow per week.

Alfalfa Needs Lime.

Probably no other field crop requires lime to such an extent as does alfalfa, and, with the exception of rather limited limestone areas, practically all of the soils of the United States east of the ninety-fifth meridian require liming for the best development of this crop.

CLOSE ELECTIONS.

Many Great Events Decided by a Narrow Margin.

HISTORY MADE BY ONE VOTE.

In Several Instances in the Life of Our Nation, Notably in the Hayes-Tilden Presidential Contest, a Single Ballot Turned the Scales.

There have been many close elections in the cities, counties and states of this great nation, as well as in the nation at large itself. In the latter class the Tilden-Hayes contest was the most sensational. In that memorable election the result turned upon the single vote of the fifteenth member of the electoral commission, who was chosen by four judges of the supreme court.

Our history abounds with instances in which the course of events has turned upon single votes, and some of them may be conveniently selected from the compilation made by Speaker Clark for one of his Chautauqua lectures.

General Jackson was elected major general of Tennessee militia by one majority. Without that one vote he could not have fought the battle of New Orleans, and politics would have been different for a quarter of a century.

Martin Van Buren won the presidency through his defeat by one vote on the confirmation of his nomination as minister to England.

John C. Calhoun, as vice president, cast the deciding vote which gave to Van Buren what Calhoun never got for himself, although his claims were not inferior.

Edward Everett lost the governorship of Massachusetts by one vote, and that took him out of the list of available for the presidency.

Thomas H. Benton was elected to the senate by a single vote. The loss of that one vote not only would have cost him his career of thirty years, but would have meant the loss to the senate of one of its strongest and most famous members in a most trying era. One of the great characters of American history might never have emerged from obscurity.

Henry Clay cast the deciding vote in the constitutional convention which admitted Kentucky to the Union as a slave state. If Kentucky had entered the Union as a free state it is hardly doubtful that Missouri would have done the same, and it is conceivable that there might have been no Missouri compromise, and perhaps even no war between the states.

The Walker tariff passed the senate by a single vote. Taft lost the vote of Idaho through a tie in the precinct of Boise. If one more man had voted for Taft Roosevelt would have lost control of the state.

There is at least one case in which a single vote was the entire election. At the primaries for the Prohibition nomination for judge in Schuykill county, Pa., one vote was cast. There being no other candidate or voter, Richard H. Koch was unanimously chosen. A miss is said to be as good as a mile, and under some conditions one vote is as good as a million.

On the other hand, a majority of 100,000 may be worthless, as was actually the case in Indiana. At the general election in November, 1900, a proposed amendment that "the general assembly shall by law prescribe what qualifications shall be necessary for admission to practice law to all courts of justice" was submitted to the electors.

Nearly 100,000 more votes were cast for the amendment than against it. But it did not receive a majority of the votes cast for presidential electors and governor. The supreme court held that it had not been carried by the constitutional majority required for the ratification of a proposed amendment. That was a case where an actual majority at the polls lost in the courts.

There would be no end to the precedents regarding the value of a few votes if the search were extended to foreign history. One example will suffice to show that the count of the votes is as important as the casting of them. In 1911 the Monis ministry fell in France because it was thought to be in a minority of fourteen, when in fact it had a majority of five. According to the contemporary cablegram:

The crisis arose over an interpellation regarding the attitude of the government as to the chief command of the army in the event of war, and the official list showed 233 votes against the government and 234 in favor.

M. Monis was still on a sick bed as the result of an accident and his colleagues decided on resignation.

The curious fact has now been brought to light, however, that at the moment of the fateful division there was considerable confusion in regard to the votes for and against.

A number of deputies announced that their names had appeared on the wrong division list. An official rectification was made, with the result that so far from having been defeated the government had the narrow majority mentioned above.

These are cases merely of misadventure in the working of the machinery of voting. The cases of malicious falsifying of popular sentiment are too numerous to record.—New York Times.

Cause Not Cure.

Wayward Son.—But, dad, you should make allowance for the follies of youth. Father.—Huh! If it wasn't for the allowance you get there'd be less folly.—Boston Transcript.

Before employing a fine word find a place for it.—Joubert.

ROAD DEBATE AT CARUS

Commercial Club Committee Discusses Bond Issue With Farmers

The Oregon City Commercial club's 12 disciples of road efficiency, as they have designated themselves, invaded Carus Friday night to urge the proposed $6,000,000 road bond issue and were greeted by a well attended meeting. Livy Stipp and B. T. McBain were the speakers of the evening for the Commercial club committee in a debate with Charles E. Spence, member of the state senate, and J. D. Brown, president of the Farmers' union.

The discussion brought out many interesting points in connection with the bond issue, and the divided sentiment of the audience made it difficult to determine which side might have had the better of the argument. The meeting was arranged by the Carus people and they invited the debate. The Commercial club's committee of 12 has a series of meetings planned that will take it to all parts of the county, and to a man the committee is confident that Clackamas county will be in the front rank of the supporters of the bond issue at the special election on June 4.
