Pupils of the Oregon City high school were thoroughly entertained on Thursday afternoon, last, by Prof. F. C. Dunn of the state university, who lectured and showed pictures upon his subject, "A Trip Through Old Rome." The lecture was under the auspices of the Oregon City Woman's club and a number of members attended.

Kent Wilson, son of Sheriff and Mrs. W. J. Wilson, was at home over Monday night, and returned on Tuesday to Vancouver, where he is stationed with the hospital corps of the National guard. Kent has recently been promoted to a sergeant in the hospital corps.

Optometry means eye service. Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Dryden are entertaining the former's mother, Mrs. D. F. Dean, of Halsey, Ore.

Mrs. John Etcheson was in Salem late last week to attend the funeral of her brother, who died recently in California and was brought to Salem, his former home, for burial.

Mrs. Stearns Cushing has returned to her home here after being confined for some time at a Portland hospital, where she underwent an operation.

Mrs. Arthur Kuehl of Oak Grove was a Saturday visitor in Oregon City.

Mrs. Ed Fortune left yesterday for an extended visit through the eastern states and to attend the meeting of the supreme committee of the Royal Neighbors of America at Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Fortune and her husband are prominent lodge workers in this city. In connection with her trip Mrs. Fortune is to take time to visit with relatives in Kentucky and other states. She will go by way of Seattle, where she will visit a brother. Mrs. Fortune expects to be back in Oregon City in July.

Neal & McClatchie Jewelry store is five doors west of elevator.

Mr. and Mrs. John Roppell are entertaining Mrs. Roppell's mother, Mrs. J. W. Martin, of San Diego, Cal. Mrs. Martin is a former Oregon City resident. She is accompanied by Mr. Martin.

Miss Clara Mitchell spent the week-end with friends at Bridal Veil, Ore.

H. B. Cartledge was returned to his home from Portland on Monday after being confined for some weeks at a Portland hospital. Mr. Cartledge has been critically ill and it will be some time before he has recuperated. Mrs. Cartledge attended her husband throughout his illness.

The Men's Brotherhood of the Congregational church is planning upon a supper to be served at the church parlors on Wednesday evening of next week. A fine program has been arranged and among the speakers will be Major W. S. Gilbert, chaplain of the Third Oregon regiment at Vancouver, and Rev. J. W. MacCallum, pastor of the local church. The Congregational orchestra under Prof. Flechtner will play.

The Rev. A. W. Mulkey of Portland will occupy the pulpit at Mountain View chapel again on Sunday. His subject will be "Times of Visitation. Are we in the midst of them?" The service will start at 3 o'clock.

MRS. WILSON ENTERTAINS

Pleasant Party as Compliment to Miss Gladys Morehouse

A group of friends assembled on Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. W. J. Wilson on Washington street to pay their compliments to Miss Gladys Morehouse, who has just returned from school in New York.

The evening was spent at cards and a delicious luncheon was served by the hostess. The Wilson home was decorated prettily in green and gold with daffodils and Oregon grape to carry out the color scheme. Miss Florence Grace won the prize at cards and received a pretty flower basket.

Those who enjoyed the evening were Mrs. T. H. Davis, Mrs. C. W. Robey, Miss Florence Grace, Miss Ellen Grace, Miss Mary Scott, Miss Evelyn Harding, Miss Erna Petzold, Miss Bess Warner, Miss Ethel Taylor of Portland and Mrs. Wilson.

Branch League Formed

Gladstone people turned out in force to a mass meeting in the school building Monday night and organized a branch of the Loyalty league, recently created in Oregon City. The new league joins forces with the Oregon City organization at the regular meeting of the latter on Wednesday evening.

William Hammond, identified with the local organization also, was elected president of the Gladstone branch, and H. O. Paddock, secretary, and F. T. Barlow, treasurer, are the other officers. Professor McNulty, Ralph Parker, Frank Boardman, Oscar Theon and E. Rauch were elected members of the executive committee.

Moose Install

The Loyal Order of Moose last Thursday installed the following officers: E. A. Brady, past dictator; O. C. Shindler, dictator; Albert Kiel, vice dictator; E. J. Busch, prelate; H. A. Shandy, treasurer; J. M. Justin, sergeant-at-arms; S. A. Shelly, inner guard; Ben Eby, outer guard, and G. F. Johnson, trustee. A. A. Price, past dictator, conducted the installation ceremonies. Following the installation a banquet was served and plans for the dedication of the new Moose building were discussed.

Chambers Wants Papers

Coote Alexander Chambers, a resident of Gladstone and a native of Canada, last Thursday applied for final citizenship papers. Mrs. Chambers came to the United States from Victoria, B. C., on September 21, 1901. First papers were asked for Thursday by Henry Watts and George Wyndham Watts, natives of Wales, and Joseph Mottl, an Austrian.

MILLS GRANT BONUS

Woolen Mill Adds 5 Per Cent Bonus to Profit Sharing Plan

In keeping with the salary bonus plan inaugurated by the two paper mill companies here this week, the Oregon City Woolen Manufacturing company, operating the Oregon City Woolen mills, has announced to its employees a 5 per cent monthly bonus in addition to the profit-sharing plan announced by the company at the beginning of the year. Each month every employee in the mill will receive 5 per cent of the month's salary as a bonus and at the same time will share in the profits.

"The bonus plan," said A. R. Jacobs, president of the company, "is in keeping with the company's policy of enhancing the welfare of the employees whenever possible, and means that we feel justified in sharing with those who create our profits the earnings of the company."

The woolen mill company will soon have ready for operation its new three-story concrete addition, which will increase the capacity of the large plant by fully 60 per cent. The building is ready for the interior finishing and covers a ground space of 80 by 250 feet.

MULLANS DIVORCED

Mr. Hesseldein Said to Have Threatened Wife With Violence

Charging cruelty and threatened violence on the part of her husband, Mrs. Louise Hesseldein Friday filed suit for divorce from William Hesseldein. The couple was married at Doylestown, Pa., on February 1, 1903, and there is one minor child. Mrs. Hesseldein asks for $250 costs, $75 a month alimony, all the furniture in their home and the custody of the child.

Judge Campbell Friday signed a decree separating Lydia and Townsend A. Van Fleet and Anna M. and Homer M. Mullan. In the latter case one of the charges made by Mrs. Mullan was that her husband spent his money for "brass horns, musical instruments and frivolous things." Mrs. Mullan gets custody of two minor girls, Mildred and Marjorie, and Mr. Mullan gets a son, Benzel.

Really Hard Work

If you think you are overworked, read what this writer in Farm and Fireside has to say about his job on a farm, although if it were typical, nobody would be left in the pursuit of agriculture:

"On May 1, my wife, boy and I moved onto a ranch. I was told that my work would consist in taking care of six head of mules, one buggy horse, milk the cow, get in some wood at the owner's house, and put in nine hours in the field at work."

"Well, I found that I was expected to be in the field and start the team promptly at seven o'clock (one field was one and a half miles from the barn), stop the team at twelve, take them to water, half a mile from the wagon, feed them, eat a cold dinner winter or summer, and be hitched up ready to move at one o'clock, work until five, drive to the house, put the mules away, split wood for the range in the kitchen, carry enough large chunks of oak wood for three heating stoves, split enough fine kindling for all the stoves, milk the cow and a young heifer, feed six head of mules, the horse, carry water about 75 yards to three head of calves, pump water by hand for all the stock, eat my supper, and if there was any time left to get any sleep, well and good."

Social Service Club Meets

The Milwaukee-Oak Grove Social Service club met with Mrs. M. T. Oatfield and Miss Amanda Oatfield Thursday afternoon. About 30 members and guests were present. Charles E. Lennon of Portland gave a talk on industrial health insurance. Miss Amanda Oatfield read a paper on "Militarism" and what it means to women. Miss Florence Olson gave a talk on best means of defraying the expenses of war. Refreshments were served by Mrs. and Miss Oatfield.

Andy Bachart, a Needy farmer, was released last Thursday after paying alimony demanded of him in a divorce decree issued Mrs. Bachart some time ago. Bachart was arrested Wednesday on an order from Judge Campbell and was brought to court by Constable D. E. Frost to show cause why he had not obeyed the order as to alimony. Bachart paid $10 toward the support of his former wife and children.

MORE ABOUT THE BONDS

If People Are Over a Barrel They Will Knock it to Pieces, Writer Says

Logan, Ore., April 16, 1917—Editor Courier:—I, too, would like to see Oregon pulled out of the mud, but I think the big bond issue plan is a poor way to go at it. "Scenic highways and interstate thoroughfares or through highways are luxuries, while market roads are necessities and should come first with governments as with individuals. It is true, as brother Starkweather says, that these proposed highways are also market roads for farmers to a great extent, but some of us who do not live alongside them can not get it through our heads that it is just or right or for the best public interests to take state funds which are raised by direct tax, as is the one-fourth mill tax, or by license, and use them to complete a hard surfaced road for the benefit of a certain lot of automobile users and a certain line of farmers, while other automobile users and numerous other lines of farmers are left to pull themselves and the biggest part of Oregon out of the mud in the old fashioned way or any other old way they can find. An automobile license, as I understand it, entitles the holder to use any road in the state; the privilege is generally made use of and therefore the license fund should be generally applied to the roads of the state. We could have no objection to the Pacific highway or any similar one coming in as a part of a general system of market road improvements to get its just share of the funds, but it arouses our ire to be told that if we vote right and have these through highways off our hands then we will have all our tax money for our market roads. Comparing the fundamental business value of the market roads with the through highways, not only to farmers but to those who live and thrive and become able to own and drive automobiles by doing business with farmers and who should be interested in developing farm industry and improvement, would it not be more proper for us to use all possible public funds to complete our main market roads, one as well as another, commencing at the market end, and when that is done your through highways will be done also.

It is claimed that with these highways completed the auto travel would be confined to them, but we know better than that. Those few roads would soon get monotonous and in good weather the machines would bump the bumps and scatter the dust over us as usual. We see no diminution since the advent of the far-famed Columbia highway, which Brother Starkweather thinks would convert us all, though I have seen that potent charm fail, though possibly it would work with the interstate bridge thrown in.

Our granger opponent thinks our whole objection to paying interest on bonds is inconsistent because we favored, or C. E. Spence did, the rural credits plan which entails interest paying on farmer borrowers. The cases are not parallel. The farmer cannot levy taxes, the state or county can. The state can levy taxes and spend it on roads or it can borrow money and spend it on roads and then levy taxes to pay back the money plus large amounts of interest. There may be advantages in the borrowing plan, if, as in the individual borrower's case, the borrowers interests could be safeguarded clear through to the finish, but when the borrower's interests go a long way out of his hands, when he votes the bonds, when such large and greedy interests are ready to get a good share of unearned money as they have in other states to the best of our knowledge and belief, then we are ready to build our barn in a term of years contrary to Benson's advice. Mr. Benson knows it would not be practically possible to bond the state for a sufficient amount to completely hard surface all our roads and provide for upkeep. I think farmers would be willing to double the 1 1/4 mill tax that was proposed and have the money spent under the advisory supervision of the highway commission by the county courts.

Farmers are not lacking in appreciation of scenic beauty, but utility comes first and the chance to enjoy scenic beauty should be divided up and passed around and not confined to certain spots and streaks. To negotiate the roads most of us have to travel and will continue to travel for a long time for all the help we would get from the bond issue, requires all our time and both eyes to maintain our direction and equilibrium.

If bonds are issued and such large sums are spent at once, the mistakes inevitably made are irrevocable, but by paying as we go and going more slowly we can learn and correct as we go, not only to build but to keep up.

Maybe the paving companies and the highway boosters, through the legislature, have placed us over a barrel, as they boast. If so, we will take the punishment or so much of it as we have to, but some time we will knock that barrel to pieces and use the staves to good effect.

YOU ARE AMBITIOUS
in buying, to get the greatest possible value for your money—a very commendable motive—one which animates a goodly portion of humanity.

One delights in securing a bargain—not in the sense of getting something for nothing, but it's comforting to know that your judgment as to real worth has been proven by the merit of the article bought.

Nowhere in the realm of mechanical inventions has more intense thought and practical effort been expended than in the department of sewing mechanism.

What's the result?
