Resume of the News of the Week from All Parts of Oregon

By the decisive vote of 3539 to 294 the members of the old Hood River Apple Growers' union, which ceased active participation in fruit distribution in 1913, when the Apple Growers' association was organized, have decided to sell their storage plants and other property to the latter association and to dissolve their corporation when the transaction is completed.

To a Baker resident, Miss Lulu M. Smith, librarian, goes the honor of submitting the winning slogan for the Union Stock show. The jury on awards, from a list of more than 50 selected Miss Smith's suggestion: "The best we'll breed for America's need," as best typifying the object of the exhibit.

Judge Gilbert W. Phelps of the circuit court, Judge Charles Marsh of the Umatilla county court and Dan Smythe of Pendleton held meetings in Milton and Freewater Saturday afternoon consulting the people with regard to the formation of a war council of 21 members for Umatilla county to mobilize the resources of the county and place them at the disposal of the federal government.

Athena farmers and citizens gave strong endorsement to the $6,000,000 road bond issue Thursday night at a meeting held there. An address was made by C. A. Barrett, state senator. Following the speaking practically every person in the large audience arose to signify endorsement of the measure.

That the fishermen on the Columbia river will receive the highest prices for salmon this year ever paid in the history of the river is now certain. At a recent meeting of the Astoria fishermen's union the price for chinooks was fixed at 10 cents a pound flat. Last week Secretary Lornsen, of the union, received a letter from the Tallman-Grant Packing company stating that it will pay the union price. The other packers have not yet announced their intention, but expected to do so in the near future.

May 8 is set as the date for opening a training camp at Oregon Agricultural college for members of the officers' reserve corps, by an order received today from General Franklin Bell, U. S. A., with headquarters at San Francisco. At a meeting of the administrative council of the college called upon receipt of the order, it was voted to graduate all eligible seniors May 1, a month in advance of the regular commencement date, so that they may take the army course.

Umatilla reservation Indians may play an important part in the production of food during the period of stress. Superintendent E. L. Swartzlander, of the Umatilla reservation, is working for the cooperation of the Indians and white renters on the reservation in cultivating every tillable acre this year. Every acre of the agency farm has been sowed to wheat, barley or potatoes, and many Indians who are not wheat raisers are producing their own hay and vegetables.

The Marion-Polk county bridge controversy suddenly came to an end last week when representatives of the two counties entered into an agreement which provides for the construction of a bridge in the next two years. The type is high level steel, the plans being those recommended in a report by the state engineer's office in January and approved by the Marion county court. County Judge Bushey of Marion county said that the county will probably ably advertise for bids within the next two weeks. The estimated cost of the bridge is $168,695, and the site will be at Center street, the location of the old bridge.

Captain J. W. Siemens, city treasurer and president of the First state and savings bank of Klamath Falls, has received word that credit has been placed at the disposal of the city of Klamath Falls in New York city to the amount of $302,100, the amount of the bonds and interest thereon issued recently by the city for the purpose of constructing the Klamath Falls Municipal railway. This road is to be a connecting link in the Oregon, California & Eastern railroad which is projected by Robert E. Strahorn. The bonds were purchased by Spitzer, Rorick & Co. of Toledo, Ohio.

With shipments of strawberries starting, Spence Wortman, deputy sealer of weights and measures, Friday sent out letters from Salem to all the district sealers in the state urging that vigorous prosecutions follow any violation of the berry box laws. He declares that the department has exhausted every effort to acquaint the merchants and growers with the law and that any violations in the future will mean prosecution.

Because all bids received were below par, the state land board rejected all the bids for the $250,000 rural credits bond issue, and instructed the clerk of the board to wire immediately to the board's attorneys in each county to cease taking loan applications. The board decided to advertise immediately for a $500,000 bond through the east, hoping for better offers and result.

The First National bank of Union, to aid the farmers and stock growers near there, has purchased a number of carloads of hay which it is selling out to those who need it in small lots at the same price as it cost. The snow is entirely gone there now and cattle and sheep are being turned out on the grass, which is getting green fast.

The board of directors of the Farmers' Union Warehouse company completed the plans Friday which will remodel the company's warehouse in Condon into an elevator for handling grain in bulk. This will give Condon two big elevators and it was the great success of the first one that led this company to make this change in its methods of handling grain.

Hundreds of acres of irrigated land that has been cleared and cultivated were offered Thursday for the raising of potatoes, onions and corn by the Western Land and Irrigation company, through E. E. Cleaver, Pendleton representative. The land lies in the west end of Umatilla county within four miles of a depot and with water at hand ready to turn on.

It is authoritatively announced that the tentative plans of the Smith-Powers logging company to build a railroad from Myrtle Point to the Smith mill in Marshfield have been given up.

As evidence of the keen interest taken by the people of Hood River in the food preparedness campaign inaugurated last week, a man with team and plow is busy turning under the sod of the big lawn around the home of E. L. Smith, ex-speaker of the house of representatives of the Oregon legislative assembly and at one time territorial secretary and acting governor of Washington territory.

Papers in injunction proceedings filed in circuit court at Hood River Friday by Miss Mae Davidson, secretary of the Hood River Orchard company, and seeking to restrain the Apple Growers' association from making a distribution of an $80,000 surplus fund were served on members of the board of directors of the association. The litigation follows a recent demand made on the association for a surplus distribution by about 15 growers who canceled their contracts and severed their membership with the sales agency prior to March 20 of this year.

Hillsboro patriotism, pent up to the bursting point, found a safety valve last week when at a meeting Thursday night a home guard was quickly organized and members met the following evening for the first drill. R. R. Ester was active in promoting the movement and stated its purpose. Dr. F. J. Bailey, who saw service during the Spanish-American war and also in the regular army, had consented to act as commandant.

While the horse show at Woodburn last Saturday was a success, it would have been a greater one if the weather had not been so disagreeable just prior to that day. The list of 71 classes was pretty well filled, although some had no entries, due to the inclement weather discouraging a number of owners from bringing in their horses. The show was given by the Woodburn Retail Merchants' association, the president of the day being W. H. Broyles.

Judgment for $1125
A default judgment for $1125 and $75 attorney fees was entered in favor of Homer A. Kruse and against Ruthena Knuckey and others in Judge Campbell's court Monday. The action was over a promissory note and the judgment is secured by a first lien to 16 acres of property in this county.

A Race at the Aero Club

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Down at Wellington they've got the aeroplane craze. There's a concern that has made a machine with a lot of safety appliances that is especially fitted for amateur aeronauts. The women have taken up the fad the same as the men. They've organized a club, with first rate starting grounds, and, although it's all brand new, there are a dozen members who own their machines and in good weather some of them are flying all the while. Those who haven't aeroplanes sit on the clubhouse porch with opera glasses in their hands watching the fliers and flitting.

A race between two individuals, Beverly Yorke and Jim Springer, took place not long ago, on which there was a lot of money placed. It wasn't a fair race, but there was nothing that came within the rules as being foul.

A 200 mile course was laid out, starting from the clubhouse. It first went to Arlington, then south to Jonesville, then southeast to Merryman, then northeast to Hilton, then straight west to Barrington, then to the clubhouse. The fliers were to go over a certain church spire in each town, except Jonesville, where there was a big factory, and they were to pass above the 200 foot chimney that belonged to it. Yorke was to start westward and Springer eastward. The one who got back to the clubhouse first was to be declared the winner. As to the fliers observing all the rules, this was secured by a club member being stationed at the different points they were to pass over.

The machines, being merely for pleasure, were not especially powerful. There were machines with strong engines in the club, but this race was limited to the pleasure class. It wasn't expected that the race would be made in less than three hours. At 10 o'clock the club grounds were full of members and guests to see the race, and a number of machines were flying about, dashing hither and thither, rising, ducking and doing different stunts.

One of these belonged to Kate Winterton, who in the air topped every other woman member for flying and on terra firma topped them all for flitting. She had every man in the club by the ears, and she was generally conceded that when she undertook to bring a man to his marrowbones he might as well come down at once. Yorke was the favorite at odds of five to four. At least these were the odds up to the day before the race. But that night they suddenly changed to two to one on Springer. The queer thing about it was that no one could find out why this change should have come about. There were rumors about Yorke not being in a condition to race or his machine having been found wanting in some particular, but they were nothing but rumors and were looked upon as mere jockeying for odds.

At 11 o'clock the two machines were rolled out on the starting grounds, the one pointed west, the other east. The racers took their seats, and half a dozen men did the starting for each machine at the same moment. As they rose the aeroplanes that were flitting about to see the fun started off in different directions, either to intercept the racers or to take some central point where they hoped to keep the machines in sight by means of glasses.

Kate Winterton's last victim was Jim Springer. She had been seen on the clubhouse porch during the evening before the race spooning with him, and it was expected by their observers that she would keep in touch with him in the contest to encourage him. But in this they were disappointed. She followed neither of the fliers, hovering over the club grounds and by signs communicating with those below how the race was going. When the racers had been out a couple of hours she was seen to fly away in the direction of Merryman and was soon out of sight.

When she came within seeing distance of the fliers they had met and Yorke had passed the halfway point greatly ahead of Springer. Kate made a bee line for Yorke, who had started westward and was nearing Hilton. He had met his opponent so far ahead of the point he should have been and felt so certain of winning that he was not pressing his machine. Kate sailed up within hearing distance.

"Oh, Mr. Yorke," she called, "I'm so glad!"
"Glad about what?"
"You're going to win."
"That's very nice of you."

They sailed along in company for awhile when something seemed to go wrong with Kate's machine. It careened first on one side, then on the other.

"I'm afraid I'm going to fall!" she cried in a voice of terror, and, true enough, she went down rapidly till she struck the earth, but managed her machine so well that there was no absolute drop. Yorke was too much of a man to leave her in distress and followed her, finding her lying on the ground beside her machine in a state of collapse.

Well, to make a long story short, Kate kept him ministering to injuries that were not serious till he had lost the race. But he came out ahead in the game of love if he lost the race. He refused to say a word about what Kate confessed was a frame up, remunerating those who had lost money backing him and otherwise showing that he was a thoroughbred. This won over Kate, and instead of Yorke tumbling to her she tumbled to him.

Y. M. C. A. IN WAR

Is One of Most Active Agencies for Help of Young Soldiers

Out where the boys are fighting, close to a hundred battle fronts, the Y. M. C. A. has been doing a work so notable in the world that Lord James Bryce, former British Ambassador to America, recently said of it: "It has been and is today one of the most active and pervasive agencies to help young men form high ideals, as well as for directing them into the paths in which they can best serve their fellows in a true Christian spirit."

The opening of a Y. M. C. A. "hut" in a German prison camp made such an impression on Ambassador Gerard, who participated in the ceremonies, that he cabled to the secretary of state: "Work of inestimable value. I hope the American association will extend the work to the prison camps throughout the world."

The records of the war disclose that no front has been so remote but that some means of conveying equipment for association work would be found. No route has been too rough and no danger to great. Where the Red Cross ministers to the men who are wounded, the Y. M. C. A. provides them facilities for recreation, creates about them the wholesome atmosphere so badly needed to offset the sordid things of camp life and keeps near them ever the reminder of home and loved ones.

Even the reader may have received a letter from some boy in uniform writing from "somewhere" along the front. It is an even chance that the letter was written on stationery provided by some portable Y. M. C. A. A Scottish minister visited the front and came back so enthusiastic about it that he told his congregation there were literally tons of writing paper and many writing tables. There were tables spread with refreshments and a platform with a piano on it. Nearby was a little chapel where the men, in all the realization of their responsibilities and dangers, could, and did, retire for prayer.

A physical director in a Canadian city saw a number of recruits turned down for lack of chest expansion and power endurance. It was his opportunity. He took them in hand. Soon dozens were reporting again for examination with the required chest expansion and power to endure. In all the Canadian associations, before their departure for active service, soldiers had right of way at writing tables, swimming pools, shower baths, in the gymnasium and auditoriums.

When Uncle Sam's national guardsmen were sent down to the Mexican border, association secretaries with equipment were on the ground almost as soon as they, greatly to the discomfort of the organized forces of vice that had also sought the camps eager to exploit the soldiers for their own pernicious purposes, regardless of the harm to them.

With the first discussion of the entrance of the United States into the world war, Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, sent out a call for special service to all Y. M. C. A.'s, saying that every new enlistment meant a new problem in character building and concluding, "The navy owes much to the Young Men's Christian Association for what it is today, for character means efficiency."

Now that the United States is definitely committed to the titanic conflict, the Y. M. C. A.'s all over the United States are mobilizing their forces so that their services to Uncle Sam's soldier boys may be as wholesomely helpful and inspiring as it is needful.

Glad to Learn of It

April's changeable weather causes colds that lead to expensive doctor bills—bills that could be avoided if the cold were checked in time. C. Smith, 1421 12th St., Augusta, Ga., writes: "I got one 25c bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and my cough and cold is about well. I was glad to learn of a great medicine like that." Foley's Honey and Tar enjoys such a splendid reputation that it is often imitated. Of course, no substitute or imitation is as good as the genuine. —Jones Drug Co.

TIGHTENING MONEY

Rates Little Changed, Offerings Less, Announcement of Federal Financing

Weeks ago, when rates were yielding, close observers of the money situation anticipated a reversal of conditions, and the expected has happened. The turn has come gradually and is just now beginning to occasion comment in some financial columns, though before the present month opened signs of hardening tendencies were clearly apparent. Without looking beneath the surface, little change is discernible, as the price of accommodation has altered but slightly and for call loans the prevailing quotation has not moved against borrowers.

Yet it is observed that funds for the fixer periods, while only a trifle more costly, are in reduced offering, both by local and interior institutions. That such facts appear is not surprising, with pending Federal loans running into the billions. Briefly, the administration's war financing plan, as announced late on Tuesday, calls for the issuance of $5,000,000, 000 in bonds and $2,000,000,000 in one-year treasury certificates, interest in each case being limited to 3½ per cent, but with the bonds bearing the conversion privilege. Concerning the latter, the bill, as drafted, stipulates that the borrowing shall be made "from time to time," and it is inferred from this that a single issue for the full amount is not contemplated, as some people seem to have imagined. Provision is made, as was expected, for large advances to "unannounced foreign governments," three fifths of the proposed $5,000,000,000 being prescribed for this purpose.

For the fourth consecutive week, call loans on the Stock Exchange ranged from 2 to 2½ per cent, and most of the business was effected at 2½ per cent. With supplies diminishing, time funds tightened further, with industrial money at 4 to 4½ per cent for 60 days; 4 to 4½ per cent for 90 days and 4 months; and 4½ per cent bid for 5 and 6 months. On mixed collateral, rates rule about ¼ of one per cent lower. Owing to the imminence of federal borrowing, commercial paper is now higher, the minimum on the best names being 4½ per cent.

CROP OUTLOOK GOOD

Portland Being Gauge, Prosperity Seems to Remain

She war developments have had no disturbing effect on trade in this territory and none is expected by merchants. On the contrary, a stimulation of business in several lines, particularly shipbuilding, is anticipated, while efforts are being made to extend agricultural production to meet the increased demand. Aside from international influences, steady progress has been made in general. These statements are made in the last issue of Dun's Review.

The crop outlook, considering the weather, is satisfactory, and a highly prosperous season is looked for by interior merchants. The launching of an 8,899-ton steamer for the Cunard line marks the beginning of steel ship construction here, while the present capacity of the yards engaged in wooden shipbuilding is taxed for the coming year.

There is an urgent demand from the east for wheat, but the prompt shipment required cannot be guaranteed, owing to the car shortage. Buying for coast milling activity is rapidly exhausting the small surplus left over from last year's crop, and the prices exceed all previous records. Flour values are keeping pace with wheat and, though close to the Civil war level, millers could sell freely to the east if transportation could be provided. Wool selling in the northwest, which had just begun, was brought to a stop by the action of the eastern wool trade associations in offering their supplies to the government and calling their buyers from the field. Spring storms caused considerable loss in the sheep-growing sections, but the clip in this state is expected to equal last year's. The advance in livestock prices at the Portland stock yards has been checked by the reduced consumption of meats, but prices have not as yet receded.

WILL PROBE RATES

Allege Discrimination Against Shippers of Portland

Investigation of the farm products rates of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company and the Oregon Short Line railroad was ordered by the Oregon public service commission at Salem last week. Commissioners said the investigation was to determine whether rates from international and Oregon and Washington points discriminated against Portland shippers in favor of Puget sound points.

The order follows a preliminary examination and comparison of rates on grain from eastern Oregon and Washington points to Seattle and Tacoma with the higher rates charged for the same hauls to Portland, according to Commissioner Corey. The companies, it is understood, allege operating conditions are different in the two states. Commissioners asserted the investigation is the largest ever initiated by the commission on its own motion.

MARKET IS ACTIVE

Steers Show Strong in Monday's Sales. No Sheep Received

The cattle market Monday was rather active at steady to strong prices, about 1100 head being received. Demand was good, all buyers having good sized orders. Central Oregon beeves made up practically all the offerings and were as usual of extra good quality. Medium grades were sold exceptionally well, there being a good call from butchers for this class of stuff.

The beef steer market showed up strong again. The feature of the trade in beef steers was the sale of a load of Redmond hay-feds at $10.50, which was 25 cents over the previous record top at this market. They were fed by H. S. Cram. There was a considerable spread of short-fed beef steers that sold from $10 up, while heavy steers sold from $9.75 to $10.12½. Prineville grain-fed steers again touched $10.25 for several loads weighing around 950 pounds. A car of 700 pound yearlings were also sold for $10.00, another record. Medium steers were quick sellers at strong prices selling from $9 to $9.50. Thin feeding steers brought from $8.50 to $9.

Demand for cows continues very good and all good cows are bringing $8.50 to $8.75. Strictly fat cows would probably bring $9. Medium grades are selling from $7.75 to $8, with ordinary stuff from $6.75 to $7.25. A few light heifers brought from $8 to $8.50.

Hog prices advanced 15 to 25 cents over last week's close. One load of prime light hogs topped the market at $15.80, while other well finished hogs brought from $15.60 to $15.75; the bulk of the sales were made from $15.45 to $15.60. Pigs were advanced fully 25 cents, bringing them from $14.00 to $14.50.

There were no sheep received for Monday's market. Prices remain steady.

STOCKMEN WRATHY

Beef Brings Big Price and Growers Cannot Cash in Eastern Oregon stockmen are saying unpleasant things about the long winter. With beef bringing $10.50 a hundred on the Portland market, the highest price known for years, they are bemoaning the fact that feeding conditions have made it impossible for them to cash in on the war-time prices.

"We have lost fully 40 days of our grazing season," said Fred Phillips, one of Baker county's leading stockmen, "and but half the grazing land is open. When these two conditions are figured, it is easy to see why the present high prices will bring little excess profits to the cattle raisers. "For the last two months the feed situation has been extremely acute in most sections in eastern Oregon. This has naturally left the stock in poor condition. It was hoped that all of the grazing land would clear at the same time, permitting the stock to scatter. As it is, however, they have to be bunched and what little grass there is available is being rapidly used up."

"Most of the stockmen cannot hope to take advantage of the present generous prices unless they fatten their cattle in the stall. This, of course, eliminates a good deal of the profits.

"Sheepmen have suffered, too, only their losses have been due to stunted lambs and deaths during the lambing season because of the intense cold.

"The average market price for beef for the last 10 years has approximated $6.50 a hundred. With war clouds looming so ominously, the cattle and sheepmen were confident of reaping a rich harvest. Now they will be lucky if they have a normally prosperous year."

Mumpowers are Charged

On warrants from Portland charging them with raising a check, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Mumpower were arrested at Stone Saturday by Deputy Sheriff Frost. The couple, members of a prominent family in this county, were returned to Portland. It was charged that Mr. and Mrs. Mumpower raised a $6 a check and drew $60 on it. They denied the charge and the denial was supported by officials here. Mr. and Mrs. Mumpower intimated here that the check in question was raised by a person whom they befriended.
