CHRIS WILHELM IS ADJUDGED AN INSANE

UXORICIDE SENT TO STATE ASYLUM BY COUNTY JUDGE ANDERSON.

Chris Wilhelm, 65-years-old, ranchman in the Wilsonville district, who attempted to kill his wife and daughter Wednesday night, was committed to the state hospital for the insane at Salem by County Judge Anderson Thursday, after an examination by Dr. W. D. Butler.

The patient will be taken to Salem today. Wilhelm was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Murray and brought to Oregon City Thursday. Mrs. Wilhelm has been in a critical condition since the attempt upon her life. The daughter recovered from her fright shortly after, and is caring for her mother.

Wilhelm was crazed from drinking hard cider of his own manufacture Wednesday. Entering his home in the evening, he attacked his wife with a half-filled bottle of the applejack, striking and knocking her to the floor. What with the blow and fright and shock, there was doubt at first that she could recover. Even yet her condition is critical.

But for Harris Miller, a hired hand, Wilhelm would have killed both his wife and daughter. Miller rushed into the house, seized the frenzied man and imprisoned him in the potato pit until Deputy Sheriff Murray, whom he had phoned for, could arrive and take the prisoner in custody and bring him to the Clackamas county jail here.

MAN Nymph IS FOUND CRAZY IN BORING WOODS

SUBSISTING UPON ROOTS AND HERBS, "WILD MAN OF KELSEA" NAKED TO NATURE.

SHERIFF BRINGS HIM TO JAIL ON A CHARGE OF LUNACY

Gambled Over the Green and Raved the Thicket Without Any Clothing—Was in Frenzied Condition When Captured.

Armed with a suit case, containing clothes, Sheriff Wilson, accompanied by Constable Frost, proceeded to a point in the woods between Boring and Kela Friday afternoon and there took in custody Daniel Clifford, almost a bearded chap, who is suffering from mental aberration.

For six days or more Clifford had been living in an old wood-chopper's shack there in the woods, dodging about through the thickets and trees, sometimes naked and other times only garbed in a shirt. People residing in that part of the county called him the "wild man of Kelsea."

Efforts were made frequently by those in the vicinity to tame the young "wildman" but without result. When any one approached him, he always ran away and hid himself in the underbrush. It was not an uncommon sight to see him threading the woods without a stitch of clothes.

Male Woodsymp. From afar he appeared at times as a sort of male woodsymp. Reports of his reversion to type had spread even to Portland. How did the man live and on what? No one seemed to know, since no one ever saw him close enough to inquire into his habits and eats.

Sheriff Wilson received word Friday that the "wild man" had become more numerous as the sun began to shine and the atmosphere moderated. S. J. Garrison, of Boring, came into Oregon City and made complaint that the young nature-lover was also "nuts" and unless the authorities got him soon, death would.

Thereupon a lunacy warrant was sworn out before the county court against Clifford and the sheriff executed it promptly. Instead of the "shooting iron," the high sheriff armed himself with the suit case of clothes. When he and Constable Frost approached the old cabin, Clifford was that weak that he did not make an attempt to get away.

Too Weak to Resist. He meekly surrendered. An old pair of overalls and part of a shirt, both filthy and torn hung about an emaciated body—a frame that had worn away for lack of nourishment and care. The officers slipped other and warmer clothes upon him and then brought him to Oregon City where he was placed in the hospital ward of the jail.

"Yes, he is insane," said Sheriff Wilson Friday night. "I tried to draw him out about himself, but to no purpose, other than to learn that he had been living on herbs and roots and a few old potatoes which he had dug out of somewhere."

"He said during fairly lucid moments," continued the sheriff, "that he had relatives back in Massachusetts, but did not seem to have mind enough to remember their names or the town in which they resided. Nor was he able to give any account of himself or why he had turned to the woods to run wild. It is a strange case. Perhaps with care and proper nourishment he may be able later on to tell us about himself."

After only 26 minutes of deliberation, a jury in the circuit court Thursday afternoon returned a verdict for the defendant in the $12,000 slander action brought by Mrs. Amy Nelson against John Miller, well-to-do Boring bachelor.

MULTNOMAH CLUB SECOND TEAM IS DEFEATED BY THE LOCAL QUINTET

The game played last night at the old armory hall between the Oregon City basketball team and the Multnomah Amateur Athletic club's second team, was one of the most exciting seen on the local floor. The game looked as if the score would be close, in fact it was tied 6 to 6 at the end of the first half, but at the finish the locals had rolled up 24 to the visitors 7 points.

The first half brought out some fast playing, though unnecessarily rough at times, by both teams. The locals did not display the usual fast teamwork in the first portion of the game, but in the last half the ball was near the Oregon City basket a greater portion of the time, in spite of the fast work of the Winged M boys.

The lineup follows:
Oregon City—Forwards, Parr and King; center, Green; guards, Miller and Mulliken.
Multnomah—Forwards, Hausler and Spamer; center, Smith; guards, Grinnell and Lillard. Smith played guard during the latter part of the game, taking Lillard's place. Smith played an aggressive game at guard, playing down the floor as forward. Buckley went in as center during the last part of the game.

Smith threw three baskets out of a tries at throwing fouls. Guard Miller of the local threw three unusually clean baskets in the last half of the game.
